MISSOURI.

The Republican State Convention—Brilliant Prospect at a Successful Campaign.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

JEFFERSON CITY, Feb. 22.—The Missouri Republican State Convention, called to select delegates to the National Republican Convention at Philadelphia, and to choose a State Executive Committee, assembled here today. About 750 delegates were in attendance, representing every section of the State. It is pronounced, even by the Democrats, to be the finest body of men that ever composed such an assembly in this State. The Chairman of the State Committee, on setting the Convention to order, congratulated the Republicans of the State upon the brilliant prospects of the party, as augured by the enthusiastic sentiment of unity that was manifest on all sides. There is an intense desire and a solemn purpose to rally under the old banner, forgetful of all past differences. The distinction between Liberal and Radical is lost of all in the pervading determination to annihilate the common enemy. The respectability and character furnished by Republicans in electing GRATZ BROWN, our present Governor, are now enlisted in the service of a reorganized party, and only the dregs remain to be employed by the possible possum coalition. It is estimated that more than one-third of those participating in the deliberations of the Convention acted with the Liberals in 1870. There is no appreciable falling off in the number of Germans acting with the Republican Party here, as compared with the number before the celebrated "bolt." Unbounded confidence in the ability of the party to carry the State for the nominees of the Philadelphia Convention is expressed on every hand, and the redemption of the State is considered certain. There was particularly observable a determination to vindicate the Administration of Gen. GRANT. Regardless of a direct vote of instruction, all express their indignation at the ingratitude of ingrees to vilify and misrepresent Republican officials, and whether or not the country should call upon Gen. GRANT to administer the Government for another term, the united Republicans of Missouri are determined not to surrender the Government to the enemy. The unwearied efforts of ex-rebels upon the Government have accomplished a good work in awakening the dormant patriotism of the country.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Feb. 23.—The State Republican Convention, holding at the Capitol today, was very fully attended, all parts of the State being represented. The Convention was not called to order until 12 o'clock, Gen. SHEPHERD, Chairman of the State Executive Committee, taking the chair. He delivered a brief address, referring to the reunited condition of the Republican Party in Missouri, and expressing his gratification at seeing in the Convention equal numbers of Liberals from the Liberal and Radical wings of the party. The election of permanent officers of the Convention resulted in the choice of Col. WAN HORNE, of Kansas City, temporary President, and BENJAMIN H. WILSON Secretary. The Convention has taken a recess till 2 o'clock, when the election of permanent officers will take place. Before the recess Hon. HENRY T. BLOW, of St. Louis, addressed the Convention, advising a closer union of the party and the abolition of all differences among Republicans. Hon. GEORGE H. SHERLOW was made permanent President, with one Vice-President from each Congressional District. Each Congressional delegation nominated three delegates and three alternates to the National Republican Convention. Three delegates and three alternates from the State at Large were also nominated. The State Executive Committee for the coming year was elected.

The following are the delegates appointed to the National Convention:

First Congressional District—Chauncey I. Filley, Henry A. Cover, John C. Orrick.

Second District—C. A. Finkelnburg, Henry T. Blow, E. O. Stanard.

Third District—George A. Mosher, Gustave St. Gerteaux and B. Calhoun.

Fourth District—Col. W. F. Cloud, J. P. Ellis and J. M. Philips.

Fifth District—Col. John H. Stager, Hon. N. McWilliams and D. O. Dollemayer.

Sixth District—William Warner, J. J. Hussl and S. T. Van Horn.

Seventh District—E. O. Thompson, N. A. Winters and John Bittenger.

Eighth District—H. F. Delmer, J. R. Peters and W. Bishop.

Ninth District—Edward Draper, E. P. Dwyer and Theodore Brewer.

Delegates at Large—Hon. John B. Henderson, S. E. Burdett and J. F. Benjamin.

The following is a synopsis of the resolutions adopted:

The first congratulates the people of Missouri and the United States that the principles of the Republican Party, as enunciated by the National Convention of 1868, and which have determined the internal and foreign policy of our Government, have realized the blessings of peace and prosperity at home, and vindicated the honor, stability and power of the American Republic among the nations of the world, and we reaffirm our adherence to those principles.

The second indorses the National Administration and resolves at length its achievements.

The third, that, while we welcome as the strengthening elements of other states, we now rejoice to welcome to Missouri for the continuation of that hopes of division in our ranks, we take this occasion to declare our fidelity to the principles of the party, in this State is now vital, and, if need and exhaustible—there is no cause for alarm, and there is no alternative—that it will poll the full Republican vote of the State for the nominees of the National Republican Convention; that the present so-called Liberal Republican faction, if considered apart from the Democratic Party, or is merely an effort to organize a minority for the purpose of organization, a mere clique of disaffected leaders, seeking to perpetuate a division which is now entirely groundless without the interest only of a respectable minority of Republicans, and powerless to embarrass the party.

The fourth declares confidence in the present Chief Magistrate, and pledges the party to support the nominee of the Philadelphia Convention.

The fifth favors amnesty and universal amnesty, and pledges the party to the nomination of the President in his behalf.

After the adoption of the platform, the Convention adjourned, and received itself into a mass-meeting. Speeches were made by Hon. E. O. STANARD, J. R. JOYCE, T. POYD, and others.

INDIANA.

The resolutions were unanimously adopted, and the proceedings of the Convention were harmonious throughout.

PROHIBITION AND LABOR.

The Convention at Columbus, Ohio—A New Party to be Formed.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Feb. 22.—The National Prohibition Convention met this morning. There were 194 delegates present from nine States. Rev. JOHN RUSSELL, Chairman of the National Committee, called the Convention to order. Hon. GIDEON T. STEWART, of Ohio, welcomed the delegates in a few remarks, urging the adoption of a platform that should place them before the country in no uncertain position. After the appointment of the usual committees, permanent organization was effected, by electing Hon. SAMUEL CHASE President. Mr. CHASE thanked the Convention in a few remarks. Charles Sumner, who was invited to a meeting in convention and forming a new party, because both the Republican and Democratic Parties ignored the question of temperance. The Convention then took a recess.

On reassembling, the Convention adopted a resolution declaring that the traffic in intoxicating beverages is a dishonor to Christian civilization, inimical to the interests of society and a political wrong.

The resolutions declare that the union is in peril because of non-prohibition, and that the President and Vice-President should be elected by the people directly, and much more to the same purport. The Convention then adjourned sine die.

THE LABOR CONVENTION.

The National Labor Convention reassembled at 10 o'clock this morning, and spent much of the time in discussing the question of admitting as a delegate JAMES KILGORE as a representative of International Section No. 4, of Pennsylvania. He was finally admitted as a part of the Pennsylvania delegation. The Committee on the Platform made a report, the financial plank of which was discussed until noon. The Committee then took a recess.

The Convention reassembled at 2 o'clock. The Committee on Platform reported resolutions, which were taken up section and adopted. The preamble declares that all political power is inherent in the people, and a free government is founded on their authority and established for their benefit, that all citizens are equal in political rights, and entitled to the largest religious and political liberty compatible with the good order of society, as also the use and enjoyment of the fruits of their labor and talents, and no man is entitled to exclusive separate emolument or privileges from the Government except in consideration of public service, and any laws in derogative of these fundamental principles are without moral binding force and should be repealed, and believing that all evils resulting from unjust legislation now affecting the industrial classes can be removed by the adoption of the principles enumerated in the following declaration:

The resolutions declare that it is the duty of Government to establish a just standard of distribution of capital and labor, by founding a money system upon the credit of the nation, based directly to the people without the intervention of any banking corporation; which money shall be legal tender in payment of all debts, public and private, interchangeable at the option of the holders for Government bonds bearing a small rate of interest, and exempt from taxation to a small amount; and legislation by Congress.

The second resolution favors the payment of the national debt according to the original contract.

The third reduces the compensation of Government officers from legislation a violation of all the just principles of the Revenue laws.

The fourth opposes the sale of public lands to individual speculators.

The fifth favors the abolition free of duty of articles in common use not produced here, and a revenue upon articles of luxury, and also such duty upon articles of manufacture as will leave the raw materials in abundance, will assist in further developing the resources of the country.

The sixth advocates the prohibition of the importation of the Chinese by legislation.

The seventh favors the Eight-hour law.

The eighth demands the abolition of the contract labor system.

The ninth favors assuming and collecting of war taxes during the progress of the war, instead of leaving the debt to posterity.

The tenth favors Congressional legislation to prevent the exorbitant charges by railroads and telegraphs.

The eleventh favors the one-term principle.

The twelfth favors general amnesty and equality of rights and privileges to all.

The Committee on Platform reported additional resolutions, the drift of which demands the subjection of the military to the civil power, and confinement of its operations to national purposes alone.

The second asks for a revision of the Patent laws so as to give labor more fully the benefit of its own ideas on invention.

The third, that fiat money and not political or personal consideration should be the only recommendation to any public office.

These were adopted without debate. A resolution for the postponement of the Presidential nomination until May was voted down.

DAVID H. DAVIS, of Illinois, was nominated for President on the third ballot, the vote standing: DAVID H. DAVIS, 261; JOEL PARKER, of New-Jersey, 7; HORACE H. DAY, of New-York, 4. Mr. DAVIS' nomination was made unanimous.

Hon. JOEL PARKER, of New-Jersey, was nominated for Vice-President on the first formal ballot, the vote standing as follows: JOEL PARKER, 113; H. M. CHAMBERLIN, of Connecticut, 97; THOMAS H. EWING, of Ohio, 32. Mr. PARKER's nomination was made unanimous.

After appointing committees to wait on the nominees, an Executive Committee of one member for each State was appointed, and the Convention adjourned, subject to the call of the National Executive Committee.

ILLINOIS.

Meeting of the Democratic State Central Committee.

CHICAGO, Feb. 22.—The Democratic State Central Committee held a session here this afternoon, to discuss the political situation and decide on the calling of a State Convention. The caucus was a close one, but it is known that the proposition to call the State Convention was voted down, and the Committee adjourned, to meet here on the 6th of May. This is regarded by the Liberal Democrats as a triumph of the positive party.

Terrible Massacre in the Argentine Republic—Fifty People Killed.

By the last Brazilian mail we receive the following:

The whole River Plate public has been horrified at the atrocities committed in the South by a band of Gaucho assassins, who in one day killed some fifty foreigners. The foreign residents of Tandil aided the authorities, pursued the villains, and dispersed them, killing few, and taking some eighteen prisoners. The leader of this murderous band, a Chilian, was captured and sent to prison, but the foreigners of Tandil broke into the prison, and then and there hanged the assassin. Government is about to dispatch a special Judge to Tandil to try the other prisoners, and it is to be hoped they will be shot by the newspapers.

WASHINGTON NEWS.

The Civil Service Board—The Walker-street Valley—Mr. Sumner's Speech—Arms Resolution—Miscellaneous.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The Advisory Civil Service Board will embody the result of its labors since the adoption of the new rules on Jan. 1, in the form of a report to the President. It is now completed, except the final revision which it is to receive, and will probably be presented within a week. There will be some exceptions to the general rules that have been adopted, but generally the additional rules will conform strictly to the principles that were embodied in those rules. The report, like the first report of the Commission, will be comparatively brief. It will be printed to-morrow.

YELLOWSTONE VALLEY.

Dr. HAYDEN has completed the report of his exploration of the Yellowstone Valley last Summer, and it is now in the hands of the Public Printer. It will soon be ready for distribution, as far as the number of copies will allow. This report is but preliminary to the more extended report that is designed to be prepared, but nevertheless it will be looked for with great interest.

THE FRENCH ARMS QUESTION.

The debate on the French arms resolution will probably continue to-morrow, as it is reported to-night that Mr. SUMNER will speak again, and also that Messrs. EDMUNDS, CAMERON and NYE will also have a hand in it. Mr. TRUMBULL's motion to reconsider the vote by which CONKLING's amendment was adopted will probably provoke additional debate, so that the end can hardly be hoped for this week.

CONGRESSIONAL UNION COMMITTEE.

Hon. JOHN H. KETCHAM has been elected to the New-York member of the Congressional Union Committee for the ensuing campaign. Mr. KETCHAM's ancestry are a sterling member, and he is a decidedly valuable acquisition to the Committee.

NOVA SCOTIA.

Opening of Parliament—The Governor's Speech.

HALIFAX, N.S., Feb. 22.—Parliament opened here today. Nearly all the members were present. The Governor's speech congratulates the Province on the general success of its industry during the past year, the continuance of the blessings of peace, the recovery of the Prince of WALES, and the successful termination of the Provincial bankruptcy dispute. In regard to emigration, the Governor promises papers respecting the conference lately held at Ottawa, and recommends Parliament to take measures to assist in carrying out the plans agreed on there. Reference is made to the construction of the Intercolonial Railway, and to the efforts made to prevent its spread. The House is recommended to provide for the extension of the insane asylum, tenders for which have already been invited. The desirability of encouraging the efforts now being made to build new lines of railway is mentioned.

THE GALLOWS.

John Travis Hanged in Canada for the Murder of Johnson.

TORONTO, Ontario, Feb. 22.—JOHN TRAVIS, who shot a man named JOHNSON in a fit of jealousy, near Newmarket, Ontario, some months since, was executed in the jail-yard this morning. He made a full confession. He said that JOHNSON was always speaking against him to a young lady to whom he paid his addresses. TRAVIS slept in JOHNSON's house the night before the murder, and started in the morning with him in a sleigh. TRAVIS states that when he got into the sleigh he had no intention of killing JOHNSON, but as they drove along a feeling of revenge laid hold of him, and he took the pistol out of his pocket, and without speaking a word, shot him dead. TRAVIS was not twenty years old, was respectably connected, and has borne a good character. He addressed the spectators expressing contrition, and said he intended to have murdered Mrs. JOHNSON. He maintained the greatest composure and died almostly instantly, only a slight convulsive motion being perceptible.

THE INDIANS.

Denial of the Story of Collecting Stores for the War-Path.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The story telegraphed from San Francisco yesterday that the Apache Indians have been accumulating stores of meal and flour on the reservations, and are undoubtedly going on the war-path, is contradicted by the authorities here, who say that the action issued to those Indians under Gen. SCHOFIELD's order has been only a quantity of a pound of beef (net) and half a pound of pork to children, and half a pound of beef (net) and one pound of corn to adults daily, and they were compelled to report daily in person to the commanding officer at the post on the reservation, which prevented them from obtaining any other food, and numbered their lodges by field for inspection and count. Indeed, the reason is so small that the army officers in charge of the reservations have complained to the Department that it was likely to drive the Apache Indians away from the posts to obtain subsistence elsewhere, which may account for the story.

Fatal Accident on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad.

PARKERSBURG, West Virginia, Feb. 22.—The "fast train" going west on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, while running with good speed, yesterday morning, ran into a heavy fall of rock sixty miles east of this place. The engine and tender ran much ahead down an embankment and several passenger-cars thrown from the track. J. DORSEY, the engineer, was instantly killed, and the fireman severely injured. The passengers escaped with slight injuries.

PADELFORD, and returned to the scene of the disturbance. Special Police have been sworn in, and the military at Newport have been notified to be in readiness to assemble at a signal.

THE INDIRECT CLAIMS.

Earl Granville's Note to Mr. Fish Received Last Night.

Jurisdiction of the Tribunal Over Indirect Claims Denied—Probable Response of the Secretary of State.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 22.—The text of Earl GRANVILLE's note, was received today by the Secretary of State in the dispatches from Minister SCHENCK, which arrived by yesterday's steamer. The note proves to have been addressed to Gen. SCHENCK, and is forwarded by him and not through Sir EDWARD THORNTON, as has generally been supposed. The note is substantially, it is understood, fully confirms the reports of its contents heretofore given in the Queen's speech, in the Parliamentary debates, and in these dispatches. It calls attention to the differences of opinion regarding the interpretation of the treaty, and says that Her Majesty's Government hold that the so-called indirect claims are not properly within the jurisdiction of the Geneva Tribunal. The note closes with the expression of an earnest hope that the treaty may nevertheless be the means of a complete adjustment of the differences between the two Governments. Secretary FISH will prepare a reply forthwith. What that reply will be is a matter of reasonable conjecture. That it will reciprocate the wish that the treaty may yet prove the means of a full settlement, there can be no more doubt than that it will be thoroughly American in spirit. There is every reason to believe that Mr. FISH will hold that there can be no full and amicable settlement which does not cover all questions submitted, and that the submission of these claims is fully covered by the treaty itself. He will, no doubt, call attention to the fact that they were expressly not waived in the protocols, and that a settlement of all questions, in the language of the treaty, would leave the question open as an arbitration for future years. It will be still unfortunate for both nations, should this Government, purpose to act solely, that the question of jurisdiction be referred to the arbitral for decision. It will afford a way of escape when justice and safety alike demand it, and it is not probable that difficulty in the way, especially as such a precedent would be established by the powerful precedent of the action of this Government in the case of the Confederate cotton loan, which was decided adversely on the question of jurisdiction. This precedent has already been quoted in Parliament, and is among the Government papers. Earl GRANVILLE and others in Parliament having reminded it that, in view of this fact, it could not approach the subject of the Alabama Treaty with clean hands. The reply of this Government will not be ready for several days, and will, therefore, not be published in Sunday's issue, but the next issue. Chas. FRANCIS ADAMS arrived here this morning, and spent an hour with Secretary FISH today.

THE SNOW BLOCKADE.

Condition of the Road and the Passengers—Fires in the Cars.

LARAMIE CITY, Feb. 22.—Four specials arrived here this morning through the blockade, one day late only. The snow blockade on the Union Pacific may now be regarded as terminated for the season, although March is regarded as a very severe month. Trains are now moving on all parts of the road, but with little regularity, in consequence of the crowded condition of the road, more than forty trains being blockaded at various points. The officials are exerting every means to push forward the loads of freight, much of which has been on the road since the middle of December, on heavy damage. Cams through freight-cars receiving $100 loss each, per day. The loss to the Company in time freight cannot be much less than $1,000 daily since the blockade. The last passenger trains reached Ogden this morning, having been six days in the snow, but the arrangements of the Company prevented large suffering. The Silver-Gilliman party of English capitalists were made generally comfortable in the hotel cars, being also six days in the snow from this point to Washington. The snow is of immense depth, and in places nearly half a mile in length, and from the absence of snow-plows on the road, when the storm began, they are the sufferers of the delay. Hundreds of men had to be removed by shovels and picks. There are only three plows on the road, and they are considered by old railroad men as being almost worthless. They run into the snow and there come stuck, making great trouble to shovel them out. There appears to be a lack of thorough railroad knowledge and experience on the part of the officials, and a great deal of mismanagement and inefficiency, one high official, it is said, persisting in sending snow-plows after trains instead of before now to get through the drifts. At the commencement of the blockade the coal-sheds on the line were almost destitute of fuel, and great difficulty was experienced in keeping the locomotives moving. Ordinary foresight seemed to be wanting. Yesterday the Company invented a number of "washes of work," greatly delaying the trains, and like accidents are liable to occur throughout the Spring. More than twenty engines are in the repair-shops, and the power of the road is, of course, greatly increased. Hundreds of passengers have recently arrived from the Pennsylvania Central. Stories are conflicting concerning the suffering of the passengers in the blockade. The Company contends that plenty of food was furnished to the passengers during it. They all shoveled vigorously in the coldest weather, with flying snow, the wind blowing a hurricane, and the thermometer 20° below zero. Many of them were frost-bitten, and a number are quite sick from exposure and fatigue. Fires broke out in the cars several times, and were only put out with difficulty. The condition of all the cars, excepting the sleepers, was horrible. On arrival at Ogden they were more like the hold of an emigrant ship than anything else, causing considerable sickness among the poor people. It will require months to put the running stock of the road in good condition again, and at great expense to the Company. The China mails were sent today. The weather is now warm and the snow is rapidly passing off.

ON THE PRAIRIE.

Terrible Storm in Minnesota—Buried Alive.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Feb. 22.—The severe storm which swept over the State on Tuesday of last week, was attended with numerous casualties. Near Beaver Falls a lady, in the absence of her husband, undertook to go to the barn and care for the stock. She was accompanied by her sister, aged seventeen. Two children were left in the house. Three days after, the husband returned and found the children upon the bed, covered with snow and nearly dead. Learning from them of the absence of the two women, he went in search. The body of the younger lady was found about half a mile from the house, and that of the wife over a mile out on the prairie. Several other fatal cases of freezing are reported in the vicinity of Windom.

Pigeon-Shooting at Jerome Park.

Five shooting-matches came off at Jerome Park yesterday afternoon. The first, was for a sweep between Messrs. HACKNEUM, JOHNSON and BEDMONT, twenty-three yards rise, eighty yards boundary, one and a quarter ounce shot. These gentlemen shot at fifteen birds each. Mr. HACKNEUM killed eleven, Mr. JOHNSON killed nine of the fifteen, and missing a too, they shot off at three birds each, Mr. JOHNSON winning by killing two of the latter to Mr. BEDMONT's one. Mr. HACKNEUM killed five out of fourteen birds.

This followed a match, at five birds each, between Messrs. F. PALMER and J. DOUGLAS BERMONT, the latter shooting at twenty yards rise, while Mr. PALMER shot at twenty-five yards. Mr. BELMONT won the match very easily by killing three birds in succession, while his opponent missed three. The latter then gave up.

As soon as the above finished, a match at a handicap, everywhere of five entrances, twenty-one birds each, one and a quarter ounce shot, eighty yards boundary, same as the first gentlemen entered, viz.: J. G. BENNETT, Jr., twenty-four yards; HENRY LEAVITT, twenty-three yards; A. BELMONT, twenty-three yards; J. HACKNEUM, twenty-three yards; W. DOUGLAS, twenty-four yards, and Mr. FELLOWS at twenty-one yards. As a whole, the shooting was very fine, considering the wind. Mr. BENNETT was the winner, killing the largest number of birds—sixteen out of twenty-one.

The next match was a match for twelve double birds each between Mr. BENNETT and Mr. BELMONT, eighteen yards rise, eighty yards boundary. Mr. BENNETT won this match, killing eleven birds out of eighteen, while Mr. BELMONT killed but five out of thirteen and then gave up the match.

There followed a match for a valuable gun between Messrs. JOHNSON and GRAY, at fifteen birds each, twenty-five yards rise, eighty boundary, one and a half ounce shot. The match was won by Mr. JOHNSON, who killed six birds out of fourteen, Mr. GRAY killing but four of thirteen.

The shooting closed for the day with a match between Mr. LEAVITT and Mr. BENNETT, eleven birds each, twenty-three yards rise, eighty yards boundary. This was a very interesting and closely contested affair throughout, Mr. LEAVITT winning by one bird, having shot nine out of eleven, Mr. BENNETT killing eight.

ENGLAND.

A Popular Excitement—Effect of the American Claims—The Point at Issue—Great Britain's Consciousness.

From a Special Correspondent.

MID-ENGLAND, Saturday, Feb. 10, 1872.

I have seen a good many popular excitements in England—panics, "funks," and the like; but I have never seen Englishmen so annoyed, so vexed, so perplexed, mortified, angry and bothered as at this moment. They are sold by their Government, outwitted by Yankee smartness, held to a treaty they never thought of agreeing to, humiliated in every way, and threatened with unbearable taxes, and more unbearable disgrace. You have read the mild allusion to the little misunderstanding in the so-called Queen's speech, and Mr. DISRAELI's gentle exceriations, and Mr. GLADSTONE's bluster. The Press, both Houses of Parliament, the whole country, I believe, is unanimous in repudiating the treaty, or its American interpretation, and Mr. GLADSTONE has no choice but to express and carry out the feeling of the nation, or resign the reins of Government. There is a Conservative reaction setting strongly against him, but his majority is still a sufficient one, and this American difficulty may save him from other dangers. Liberals must support him now, and even the Conservatives are blamed if they show a disposition to make party capital out of a national calamity. The American case is to be republished here in a few days by BRITLEY. English lawyers will read it eagerly, in the hope of learning something which may sharpen their wits and generate. The English case is all in black and white, and it cannot stand out against the American case at all. It reminds me of the poor little lamb drinking down stream, while the wolf is leaping above. And it was all so jolly at Washington making the treaty! Didn't the English Commissioners dine with you at Delmonico's when it was over, and talk of peace, and good fellowship, and "blood thicker than water?" Poor Lord GRANVILLE is utterly upset by the turn things have taken, and has such a sharp attack of the gout that he can only get about on crutches. The Franco-Prussian war killed Lord CLARENDON!

THE POINT AT ISSUE.

It is all very fine for you to say that the American claims, whatever they may be, must be referred to the Arbitrators at Geneva. This is the very point at issue—the point which the English supposed to be settled by treaty—what should be referred. If there is no limitation to their powers, they may take a fancy to double the English national debt, or give you Canada or Ireland. Not too much confidence is felt in the referees, two of whom do not understand English, and one, it is said, knows not even French. There must be some limitation to such an arbitration. Aside from money, there are questions which cannot be submitted. The English admit carelessness, or laxity, or delay as to the escape of the Alabama, and have apologized and been ready to pay suitable damages. Naval officers have been consulted as to the cost of pursuing that vessel. There is talk of a proposition to square it by paying $6,000,000. Hundreds of millions are another matter. As a little indication of English feeling, it is stated that a very friendly appeal of English authors to the American Government in favor of a copyright treaty was in course of signature when this cloud suddenly overshadowed us. Not another signature was added, and the matter will wait for a more convenient season. Repudiation is repudiation. The English stand by the Treaty as they understand it. They made and signed it with a certain understanding, which was frankly declared, and neither law nor equity can a man or a government be held to agree to anything except his own understanding of what he agreed to—his own intention. If two parties sign a document capable of bearing different constructions, each can be held only to the construction he put upon it when he signed it. A law is what the legislature intended it to be. A bargain is what each man agrees to. England declared she made and intended to make a certain treaty—you try to hold her to another. It is not for the arbitrators to say what the English meant. They can better say

FRANCE.

A Dinner to Gen. Sherman—The American Squadron at Spezzia—Tidings from Spain—Legislative Proceedings—The Alabama Claims.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Friday, Feb. 2, 1873.

There was a grand dinner at Nice a few days ago, at which Gen. SHERMAN, Fred. GRANT, Minister WASHBURNE, and a number of American Envoys, including the little ville de plaisir, participated. To the great detriment of Paris many strangers have been driven by the cold into southern and probably cheaper towns. If prices are high at Nice, at least you get something for your money, which is more than can be said of this city, and as residence there has suddenly become fashionable, perhaps on account of the expected visit of the Prince of WALES, the tide of travel has set in that direction. Within the circle of my own acquaintance, a score or more of wealthy gentlemen have closed their purses to the Parisian shopkeepers, and started for the races, which begin on Sunday next, and they will remain at Nice until driven northward by Summer heats. Judging from my private letters, Nice must have been very gay during the past week, while the officers of our fleet were there. The grand dinner of which I spoke was given at the hotel where most of the Americans reside, the dining-room being tastefully decorated by flags borrowed from the ships. The bill of fare was something uncommonly artistic, and prepared with that reckless disregard for expense for which our countrymen in Europe are noted. Minister WASHBURNE made a very clever speech, and Gen. SHERMAN spoke with his usual dignity and good sense. When the table was cleared, Mr. WASHBURNE proposed, to open the fire, the health of the President of the United States. This brought up young GRANT, who spoke sensibly and well, and succeeded in convincing every one that he is very liable to be what his father never was, and never pretended to be, a good orator. Everything passed off happily, and there was a good deal said about the proposed trip to the East, which was destined to be rudely postponed a few hours later. The plan had been arranged for all of the vessels of the squadron to meet at Spezzia, and then, go to Naples, for the purpose of taking Gen. SHERMAN and his party on board. But this plan was interrupted by a dispatch from the Secretary of the Navy to Rear-Admiral ALDEN, ordering the entire squadron to rendezvous at Villafranca and remain there ready for orders. It was intimated also that the fleet might be needed for the Madrid service. As our relations with Spain seem to be critical state, there was no difficulty in divining the probable meaning of this order, and I need not say that every man was ready for any emergency. We have a fine fleet of warships here, and a splendid personnel, and this may be depended upon to uphold the honor of the flag in Eastern waters until reinforcements arrive, whatever may be the order for recall. Alighieri at the same moment, we have news of the Shenandoah affair; and with at the worst this Spain will apologize. Should this be the case, the Eastern trip may yet be made, but for the moment a new programme has been adopted.

THINGS FROM SPAIN.

I have already told you of the fusion of the Spanish Bourbons, and their plots to regain the throne, shaky, this, with the revolution in Cuba, is quite enough for a country which cannot agree upon a Cabinet. But there is a great deal more. The Carlists are "at it" once more, and are said to be arming again upon the frontier. At Barcelona the troubles continue; there are constant riots, and the Police were fired into the other day. They returned the fire, killing several citizens. In other towns the revolutionists are encouraging outbreaks. At a naval station in the south, an officer openly denounced King AMADEUS, using outrageous language, and drawing his sword to cut in pieces the portrait of his sovereign. This hot-headed young fellow was at once arrested, and may pay for his folly with his head. I mention the incident to show that Spain is not so tranquil at home that she can count much upon the enthusiasm of the people in a war made by the present King, and her army is not to be depended on in case any one of the pretenders take advantage of the war to make a strike for the throne. Americans here agree that it is not worth while using menaces with a little one-horse Power like Spain, but they think she would do a great deal better for herself to devote her energies to the formation of a capable Ministry, and to the improvement of her finances. As for poor Prince AMADEUS, he is very likely to fall into MAXIMILIAN—betrayed even by the party which sent the man—and to fall to the fury of a Madrid mob. He would do well to study Spanish character in the tragedies of Queretaro and the examination of Paris, and then take the next train back to his father.

LEGISLATIVE PROCEEDINGS.

The French Chamber is still engaged in discussing the English treaty, and, contrary to his promise, M. THIERS has once more taken his seat upon the Ministerial bench, and is engineering with all his power in favor of his protection theories. Yesterday, he joined in the debate against GAMBETTA, and made the astonishing announcement that treaties of commerce were only valid so long as the nation which adopted them felt its interests benefited by them. M. POUYER QUERTIER made the same assertion, and developed the theory in the attempt to prove that France had been taken in when making those commercial treaties, and now wanted to get free once more, or, as M. THIERS expressed it, "To regain her liberties." This is equivalent to saying that M. THIERS and his Financial Secretary are right, and the statesmen of every other European country entirely wrong in the matter of international treaties. M. THIERS says that he cannot govern France without this special tax upon new material or without his system of protection, and in order to secure that system it is absolutely necessary to modify (he used the word "denounce") the treaty with England. But I cannot see what good it will do to denounce the English treaty, while the same hand of treaties exist with seven, eight and ten Powers to end, with Austria, Holland, Switzerland, Belgium, Spain and Italy. It is apparent at a glance that the effect would be to throw the trade in the opposite direction, and to bestow upon Germany the commercial advantages withdrawn from England.

ENGLAND'S POSITION.

The impression has been at Versailles that the treaty with England must be denounced before the 4th of February, or it could not be denounced until the 4th of February, 1875. The other day, however, the Government saw a floating decidedly hostile to the idea of denunciation, and made the remarkable statement that the matter could be settled at any time. The English Government had been asked its interpretation of the treaty, and the reply was that it understood that the treaty could be denounced at any date, the terms to cease, twelve months after. This piece of honesty astonished everybody. Even the Press were quite taken aback by it, and began at once to search for some motive. Certainly, England desired to maintain the treaty, she had reason to hope that it could not be broken in twain on the 4th, why then did she not gain a year by giving the French Interpretation to the treaty? As it was not thought probable that England would be honest where it was seemingly her interest not to be, the French were thoroughly intrigued, and really began to think that there was some kind of a snare in this reply. Various rumors were circulated. One journal imagined that the intention was to delay the debate until the arrival of M. ROUHER, who would oppose the idea of breaking the treaty; but none admitted that it was from pure honesty that such a reply was returned. The use which the Government made of this reply was strongly in favor of the treaty, for several Deputies spoke warmly, and wanted to know why the Chamber was treated in this way. They had been allowed to discuss a revenue bill as regards for some days; a declaration was drawn from the Ministry that in this manner the Government was bound by honor to carry out what they had been urged to a hasty, and upon the English treaty, which was that they would not interpose on the 4th of February,

ITALY.

Address on the Capitol—Proposed Archæological Exploration—Improvements—Embankment of the Po—German Archæologists—An English Museum.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ROME, Monday, Jan. 27, 1873.

Since the Italian Government made a liberal appropriation, and took into its hands the direction of archæological explorations, a new impulse has been given to these researches in Rome. The excavations on the Palatine Hill go on with more energy than ever. Always there is a throng of statues, and broken statues, fragments of columns and masses of masonry of the Imperial period, are from time to time unearthed. In almost any part of Rome, come a little deeper than usual in digging for the foundations of houses, or in putting down gas and water pipes, some fragments of antiquity are thrown out. In going yesterday to the Roman University, not far from the Pantheon, I saw two gigantic masses of red granite columns, which had been struck in digging a street drain. All that region is a thick bed of the débris of the ruined grandeur of the ancient city. It is a mine of archæological treasure, which is before long to be opened. Among the work laid out for the improvement of Rome is that of the destruction of the houses in the neighborhood of the Pantheon, leaving a broad open area around that great monument. There is now on exhibition at the Capitol a plan of the changes to be made in the old streets of Rome, and of the new ones to be laid out. The design embraces a very large amount of work, and a considerable period of time will be required for its full execution. It may be mentioned that all the houses between the two narrow streets leading from the bridge of St. Angelo to St. Peter's are to be thrown down, which will give a full view of the front of the great Temple a half a mile before reaching it. Five new bridges are to be thrown across the Tiber; the face at the Piazza del Popolo, and the next between that and the bridge of St. Angelo, and the others further down the river. All the outworks of the fortress-sepulchre of Hadrian are to be destroyed, and in the open fields, beyond the Castle, new quarters are to be laid out. Something like five and twenty new cuttings will either widen or connect streets already existing. The throwing down of several masses of old structures will be with the view of forming a number of squares or large open spaces, of which that before the fountain of Trevi will be the principal.

RESULTS OF EXPLORATIONS.

Returning to the Palatine Hill and the Roman Forum, and the subject of archæology, notice is to be taken of the progress in discovery every day made. A few days ago, among the ruins of the Cæsar's palace, a colossal statue in a sitting posture was found. Except the head, which is missing, the figure is nearly intact, and although not of a very high order, as a work of art, it is interesting as an object contemporary with the architectural conformations of which it formed an ornament. In the Forum the excavations are making rapid progress in the direction of the Temple of Antoninus and Faustina and the Arch of Titus. It is in that part of the classical centre, where the earth deposits are deepest, and the Roman pavements is thirty or more feet below the present surface level. The laborers are just now uncovering the marble steps of a structure which seems to have stood near the centre of the Forum, and not far from the temple of Castor and Pollux. By another year the whole area will be cleared out, and we shall be able to judge with more accuracy than ever before of the topography of the Roman Forum. To complete the work, it will be necessary to remove every obstruction quite up to the foot of the Capitol Hill, on the one side, and to the wall of the Farnese Gardens on the other. Several churches of a very bad style of architecture which disfigure the Forum, it will be necessary to destroy. Papal Rome has shown extremely bad taste in building, within the classical inclosures of temples of Greek architecture, its servants clerical structures, or burying them quite out of sight with the piles of modern rubbish. As soon as the Government finds itself rich enough to make a large annual appropriation, a good many buildings that now cover up the remains of interesting historical structures will be removed and their sites thrown open. The work will not be easy, as the modern level is in many places twenty or thirty feet above the ancient, and the earth removed has to be carried miles before a new place of deposit is found. In many cases the encumbering structures are not of a substantial character, and the cost of removing them will not be great. There are large open spaces covering classical sites, which are desirable positions for new buildings, and they will fall under the control of Government, and the temptation is great to obtain from them a revenue by sale; a temptation, which in the interest of art, should be guarded against.

GERMAN ARCHÆOLOGISTS.

So far as concerns the promotion by association of archæological studies in Rome, the German Society takes the lead. That organization has had an existence of more than forty years, and has had among its active promoters such men as BUNSEN, NIBBY, GERHARD and WELCKER. It is under the patronage of the Government of Prussia, and is in correspondence with the Central Society at Berlin. Weekly meetings are held, at which reports of new discoveries and papers discussing subjects connected with archæological science are read, and all the transactions of the Society are published in the Weekly Bulletin, more than forty bound volumes of which form a portion of the library of the Society. The magnificent illustrated publications of the parent Society at Berlin are among the noblest contributions to this branch of science which have yet appeared. The library of the auxiliary association here in Rome, is pretty furnished, and, indeed, is nearly complete, having on its shelves nearly everything of value that has yet been published, illustrating these learned studies. The rooms of the Society are on the hill of the Capitol, where, in different buildings, several German institutions are accommodated. From the beginning all the transactions of the Society, whether in printed publications or in the papers read, and discussions at the meetings, have been carried on in the Italian language. As the Archæological Society of the Pontifical Government is no longer active, the Italians have the benefit of the operations of this foreign organization, whose meetings are open to all who are interested in such inquiries. With those of other nationalities the Italians take advantage of this liberality, and at the meetings may be seen a very Cosmopolitan representation.

AN ENGLISH SOCIETY.

The English Archæological Society was organized but a few years ago, and has not yet acquired an important status as a contributor in this sphere of knowledge. With no assistance from the Home Government, or corresponding societies in England, it is obliged to depend upon the annual fees of members, and the revenue is extremely meagre. The principal part of the small and select library was bought with the sum of five hundred dollars, contributed by Mrs. POLDEN, an Anglican lady. Encouraged by this donation, and despairing of receiving adequate support from England, the Society has lately changed its name, and is now called the "Etrusca and American Archæological Society," with officers selected from both nationalities. Mr. PARKER, the active head of the Association, with reputation for much knowledge of the antiquities of the Roman Forum, has not exactly entered the field; and, in his temperament, has been so unfortunate as to put himself in antagonism with Signor ROSA, who has from the Italian Government the direction of the excavations now going on. Archæologists are sometimes almost as dogmatic in their opinions and theories as the theologists, and their disputes are nearly as bitter. The Government Archæologist permits from time to time errors of taste, which are severely criticised; but he has the confidence of those by whom he is employed. His principal error has been in allowing to restore some of the ruins, of the style of which there may be had of the part of the original structure, the intuitive Government with all our reverence of classical history, and they have been to have not or an absurd feeling, attracting, we are on the spot, and our eyes are fixed on the monuments of Rome upon which CICERO, and SENECA, and TACITUS trod. To read their works without the memory of the ancient world which they lived and thought and wrote; and by no means to be able to study them for a moment become one in that circle of great minds. Today we walked on the Palatine Hill, and on the Sunday after we spent with Horace and Virgil in the Sabine Hills. Thus before the age passes on the great procession of history. ANGELICO.

ULTRAMONTANISM.

Prince Bismarck—Its Implacable Foe—What the Radicals Are Doing—Schools for Priests.

Institutions and Policy.

Correspondence of the London Times.

BERLIN, Feb. 8, 1873.

Another deliberation of war has been added to the wrangling already exchanged between the German Government and the Ultramontanes. In a recent sitting of the Prussian Landtag, in a debate on the Government Bill aimed against the machinations of the Catholic clergy, an Ultramontane member repeated the standing complaints of his party against the politics of Imperial Hohenzollern. After denouncing upon the delinquencies of a modern Caesar, who are not inclined to coerce the masters in public schools into teaching new-fangled dogmas, the combative member proceeded to assume the general bent of his official adversaries. Speaking of and name of his party, he actually avowed he was opposed to the unity programme of the existing Administration, and that he desired a closer connection between the various German States, as more congenial to the habits and traditional tendencies of this people. Thus provoked, Prince BISMARCK rushed to the front, and in a speech, than which nothing can be imagined more candid and blunt, demolished the arguments employed by this champion of federalism. Thus speech is probably one of the longest ever delivered by the Chancellor; but as the thoughts are compact and the language very distinct, the principal passages admit of being condensed into a small space. The Prince said:

"I have long hesitated to believe that a Parliamentary party could form itself in this country, not on the basis of a political programme, but on the ground of opposing religious convictions. But yet it has come to pass. Men of opposite politics, conservatives and radicals, who have never cannot to constitute what is commonly called the Ultramontane fraction of this House. I could not regard this otherwise than as a mobilization of the Ultramontane interest against the State; nor could I underrate the importance of the fact, seeing that the new party have been strong enough to obtain in some moral wards at any rate, the return of candidates utterly unknown to the constituencies and recommended by no one except the zealous agents of this particular faction. With this peculiar composition of the party their action in the House is fully in accord. Herr von MALLINCKRODT, the protecting spirit of the fraction, has taken his place at the head of this novel organization. He is one of those few, though highly respectable, politicians who, when their principalities joined this Monarchy some years ago objected to the change. His views in the more comprehensive sphere of German Federal politics are likewise subject to doubt and hesitation. At least, it is a matter of speculation, whether he may not prefer dismantling the present common Constitution of the land with the idea of replacing it by an arrangement more closely resembling the Germanic union of Diets. The attitude of the gentleman and his party is, I grieve to say, anywhere but friendly to the Government. I will not conceal from you that the Government had hoped to rely upon the assistance of an honorable element in the people, and thought it had a right to expect that they, above all, would rebuke with Caesar the things that are Caesar's. Instead of this, they ranged themselves unanimously alongside the Ultramontanes, and, as I regretfully attacked in papers and in speeches desired for the instruction of the lower classes. This conduct is the more extraordinary, inasmuch as the Pope and the Prussian Bishops of the Catholic Church have repeatedly acknowledged the perfect liberty their Religionists enjoy under our laws. In the recent fight against the Ultramontane party cannot be actuated by dissatisfaction at the position the Catholic Church holds, and indeed has long held among us. Unfortunately, however, we are at no loss to discover the motives. When we find this party leagued with Radicals of every gradation, when we find them acting in concert with men whose extreme politics make them avowed enemies of the Prussian Constitutional Monarchy and the German Imperial Commonwealth—we need not wonder at their determined opposition to the Government, and we in the painful position in which we now are with regard to them. As to the complaints that the Prussian Government has recently changed its liberal and conciliatory attitude towards the Roman Church, they are utterly unfounded. All we have done is this: We have prevented Catholic Bishops from deposing, or causing to be deposed, teachers and professors, masters in our public schools and servants of the Government. In resisting this interference with administrative affairs, we are correct by the letter and spirit of the law; and if it is alleged that these gentlemen ought to be dismissed because they have ceased to be Catholics, I can say in that this is a contested question under existing statutes, and that the enactment of fresh laws will be required to solve the doubt. The Ministerial of this kind the minister, the Minister for Church and Educational Affairs will, I believe, regard as one of his primary duties. The Prussian Government respect the religious convictions of all the various Churches represented in this State; but their object is cannot the Sources of contagious and authoritative, and to establish, as it were, five or six Roman Catholic Churches in one and the same country. For this reason they have recently abolished the Catholic Department in the Ministry of Worship and Educational Affairs. They maintain that there ought to be but one Government Department regulating the relations between the State and the Church, and that this Department, on the other hand, as regards the Catholics, is for my part, am not so at all disinclined to resume a Nuncio as a permanent representative of the Pope at Berlin—and perhaps, I might be able to overcome the objections at yet offered to the idea, as a lofty subject of concern, are, so exceedingly delicate and precarious relations quickly. In the meantime, I desire that the Ultramontane party have a right to consider themselves as the representatives of the majority of the Catholic fee subjects of this State."

As the reader will perceive the above speech is distinguished by a peculiarly reasonable tone, any allowance of its sagacious author. While frankly admitting that a fight is being forced upon him by domestic enemies, and calmly taking up the gauntlet flung down by his adversaries, he at the same time makes peaceful overtures, accompanying the olive-branch with dignity, and toning down the heat of the combat. Will the permission to have a representative at the German capital cause the Pope to relent? Will the granting of a long-coveted concession make him contentment the present attack begun by his camp and bellicose host? A matter of small moment it be doubted. At slight cost Bismarck has induced the Vatican to enter upon a wrestling-match with the national genius of Germany; no fresh facilities for the keeping up of mutual relations will be able to shake a resolve, which must have been prompted by the conviction that war, not diplomacy, was the one thing needful. It is the reunion of Germany into an organized whole which is thought to threaten the interests of the party temporarily paramount in the Church; it is not the action of the Imperial Government, who would wish to be friends with the Pope, but whose very existence, which gives offense. If the Pontiff and his Council were men of temperate views, they would have tried to make the best they could of a bad bargain, and have allied themselves to any Government disposed to countenance established religion, no matter whether Catholic or Protestant; but they object to a Protestant Empire—nay, they object even to Catholic Cabinets, unless they consent to uphold the Syllabus and its supplementary decrees. It may be doubted whether the method they have adopted for combating the spread of irreligion and promoting the ascendency of their particular creed was wisest which could have been devised, but certain it is that the uncompromising ardor with which they have set to work, and the powerful resistance they have awakened, has a tendency to create a religious movement even in a country so much engrossed by other questions as this. The last few weeks we have been treated to I do not know how many pastoral letters, election addresses, and other authentic utterances proceeding from the Romanist quarter. Roughly speaking, I should say they are every one of them conceived in a spirit utterly repugnant to the immense majority of educated people in this country. Even if they cause the lower orders, as they are likely to do, in some few localities, if the agitation goes on, still they inflict inconceivable damage on the Church in the upper strata of society, and by deepening controversy tend to lessen Association. At the same time, Dr. DOLLINGER has resumed his activity and is lecturing at Munich University upon the desirable reunion of the various Christian Churches, or, what is practically the same, the overthrow of the Pope.

The Ohio Republicans and President Grant.

Not a little misery has been caused in certain quarters by the report that the Republican State Central Committee of Ohio had passed resolutions recommending the renomination of President GRANT. The unhappy individuals who have mourned so grievously over the "impropriety" of this course, may be relieved upon learning that the Committee did nothing of the kind. The resolutions alluded to were adopted by a Republican meeting held at Columbus, Ohio, on the evening of the day on which the Committee met. That meeting was participated in and addressed by members of both Houses of the Legislature and other leading Republicans from a portion of the State, and there is no doubt that in expressing its desire for the renomination of the President it gave utterance to the wishes of a large majority of the Republican Party in Ohio.

Value of spring fruit $600,000
Expense of picking $150,000
Expense of commission 200,000 1,000,000
Net product this year $1,000,000

The annual value, in instance, is unknown. In 1868 the crop was a total failure. In 1871 it was immense, but prices very low. A crop, however, may be relied upon three years in four, and the return is as certain as for wheat. There are now 10,000 acres in peaches, producing 75,000 baskets, and putting up 150,000 cans.

A VEXED QUESTION.

The Medical Bill and the Medical Profession.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

SIR: As your article under the heading of "The Medical Bill," in the TIMES of the 17th inst., is calculated to inflicate both the medical profession and the public, it seems clearly my duty to counteract that effect.

The bill therein alluded to, and entitled "An Act to Protect the People Against Quackery and Crime," originated in the New-York Medical and Legal Society, of which I have the honor to be the presiding officer. On account of my relations to that society, not to allude to my interest in the whole subject both as a citizen and a physician, I have a very intimate knowledge of the history, the provisions and the objects of that bill; and if it be a matter, as you say, "watched with much interest by the members of the medical profession generally," it is my duty to inform them, as well as the public, what the bill does provide, and what are its objects.

First—The sole object of the bill is to secure an amount of equanimity in persons who offer their services to the public as physicians, surgeons or midwives, which shall warrant for such service.

In order to secure that consummation the bill provides that the censors of existing medical organizations, known as medical societies for the various counties of the State, shall have the power, and it shall be their duty, to decide upon any question which may arise in such county as to the professional qualification of any physician, surgeon or midwife practicing in such county. The bill carefully specifies and secures rights or granted franchise that any physician, surgeon or midwife may possess, providing that such apparent right and franchise be not proved a fraud upon the public.

Whole diplomas from medical colleges and from authorized boards of censors are, if they be genuine, received by this bill as evidence of adequate preparation for practice, and the provisions of the bill do scarcely empower the censors to go behind the mere diploma and enquire into the manner it has been obtained, and into the qualifications of the person presenting it. Without such a power the people cannot escape the results of the quackery and the sale of forged diplomas. The exercise of this power is, however, limited by the bill in such a manner as to protect any meritorious person, male or female, from oppressive action on the part of the censors, it being the claim and the declared intention of the proposed act not to annoy any qualified servant of the people.

As to the various so-called schools of medicine, the bill is so drawn that does school not recognized by the State will be held responsible before the people for every surgeon, physician or midwife to whom the censors of the society of that school issue the certificates required by it. All schools and all societies recognized by State law have therefore, under this bill, equal rights and similar duties. As the bill makes the local county censors the judges in the case above alluded to, and might thus be employed as the agent of a local prejudice against a person, the bill favors any such person by enabling him to seek his certificate in some or any other county of the State, and also by requiring that the certificate permitting to practice can be revoked only for crime and misdemeanor, and by the censors issuing it and testy by making said certificate, issued by any county censors of the State, valid for all the purposes of the bill in every county of the State.

So far, therefore, from the bill's being adverse to the interests and feelings of the so-called new schools, homeopathic, eclectic, &c., I am certainly informed that both of those schools, at their late meeting at Albany, adopted and advocated the bill on the ground that it was directed to the public good, and to nothing else. On the other hand, it is a source of unfeigned sorrow to me personally that against my request the Medical Society of the State of New-York—the regular, of old school, as you are pleased to call it—at its each meeting in Albany, carried a one-sided vote, not to approve the bill. This vote was taken upon the ground that a state medical society, more than one-third of those present were—in even the most superficial way, acquainted with the bill, and when even those who spoke against it, evidently did not understand it. It is due to the public, in your intimate bill was prepared, to know the objections to it urged by this class of our physicians.

First Objection—It recognizes the legal and the popular existence of the Homeopathic and Eclectic schools chartered and sustained by the people and the State.

Second Objection—It proposes to see that all persons are sufficiently educated in matters pertaining to the profession of medicine they assume to practice, to make it safe for the people to employ them. Against this last objection, on the ground that protective legislation has always failed, there is force. If no one trying more, if people with A.M. be deceived and employ all sorts of physicians and quacks, whose pretensions to be regarded as belonging the regular profession, they deserve what they get.

Third Objection—Some of the men who were Bishop of Vivier, declared that the Ultramontane Party was anti-Catholic; but now you treat as heretics and schismatics the Catholics who persevere in rejecting Ultramontanism. You frequently declared infinite cries to be true universal truth which, in the words of VINCENT DE LERINS, was "everywhere, always, and by everybody" believed. Now, you stigmatize as heretics those who refuse to receive it; but now this Catholic truth has degenerated to gourmand to Roman truth. Formerly the Catholic Church was the foundation of all particular Churches, but now in your eyes and those of your adepts all the churches are subordinate to Rome and the Pope. The universality of the Church of Jesus Christ is degraded to the individualism of one man. You, in fact, ignore Jesus Christ, and care only for his vicar, whom you make his master; for with you the Gospel is subordinate to the Pope. Formerly, when the Apostles met about to put upon it—the Gospel is no longer Jesus of Jesus Christ, but the bull which, at may, is the good pleasure of any present or future Bonifacius to issue.

M. MICHAUD then proceeds to say that, rather than submit his conscience to the tyranny sought to be imposed upon it, he prefers his Church preferment. His friends tell him he will be excommunicated, but he cares not. In resigning the vicarship of the Madeleine he breaks a career, and gives up brilliant worldly prospects. He does not know in what way he may be entitled to earn the unrest necessaries of life. But he prefers poverty with honor to riches with remorse. He will still be a priest. He will baptize, marry, confess, bury, and give absolution whenever called upon, and he will wait for better times when he may again preach. Meanwhile he will write and remonstrate. The Ultramontanes, A committee will meet at his house. Rai se dénouera de Mailly in connection with Anti-Ultramontanist Committees of Russia, Germany, England, Italy and Spain; and as soon as sufficient money is collected churches will be opened in which independent priests will try the question, whether Christ and his Gospel are to govern the Pope, or whether the Pope is to supplant Christ by the Syllabus.

The Jumel Ejectment Suit—Revolutionary Records.

In the Jumel case, yesterday, counsel for the defense offered in evidence two commissions issued to one SEBASTIAN CLARK, as ensign of Providence constitution, also a Second Lieutenant in the Revolutionary Army, and another bearing his signature, as Lieutenant, and signed by JOHN HANCOCK, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence. The evidence was offered to show that the family of the plaintiff, Mrs. Jumel, was a different one to the Bowers tracts to be, in fact, the grandfather of Mrs. Jumel.

ADRIAN B. MILLS, an old resident of Washington Square, testified that he was familiar with Mrs. Jumel's family; all his dealings were with her; she had never mentioned that she had a sister; Sebastian W. Clark, who died in this City, said he lived near Mme. Jumel, was often in her house, and accompanied Fire-Marshal Baxter when he went to inquire about the burning of the barn. He denied that Mme. Jumel said, and wished to get rid of the people never had, and that she had said she would take one day return and drive them away. MICHAEL W. DEVINE, lawyer, of this City, said he had met the plaintiff, Bowen, at Providence, when he (Devine) went there on business connected with the Bowen estate. Witness thought he knew that Bowen had then told him he did not know who the father was; they had met. Bowen was not his mother, and added that he had visited Sarah for many years, and if he had known she was the mistress of his mother she would have spoken to her.

AUDITING THE ACCOUNTS.

Important Meeting of the Board of Audit Yesterday—A Large Number of Claims Against and Claims Against the Department of Parks.

The Board of Audit met yesterday afternoon. Present—Comptroller GREEN, President pro tem. of the Department of Parks, and Commissioner VAN NORT. There was the usual crowd present of persons anxious to get their money.

Mr. HENRY MERRITT desired a protest against any further payment being made to JAMES E. COULTER for salary as Police Justice, because the protestant did not believe that COULTER was elected to the office, but holds the same under false and forged returns of the election. The protest was that upon the same.

A resolution was adopted that the pay-rolls of officers and appointees of the Law Department in the office of Public Administrator for the months of September, October, November and December, be audited and allowed for $4,000 in.

A resolution was also adopted that the payrolls of employees of the Law Department for October, November and December, be audited and allowed for $4,000 in.

A resolution was adopted to pay the sum of $4,000 in order to the Health Department, for appointees of the Health Department for September, October, November and December, 1872; also, to pay the members of the Board of Assistant Aldermen $21,000 for October, November and December, 1872, and appointees of the officers and appointees of the Bureau of Markets, $7,046 22, for four months to December, 1872; also, to pay collects and appointees, $11,671 60; JAS. W. WHITNEY, $27,388 for 3,000 barrels of flour furnished the Commissioners of Charities and Correction; the officers and appointees of the Controller's office, for the month of October, $4,000; also, for the salary of the Auditing Bureau for the same period, $2,000; also, the appointees of the Bureau of Receiver of Taxes for same period, $4,000; the officers and appointees of the Bureau of City Revenue, same period, $5,911 96; also, to pay the claim of thirty-nine men on the roster of the Department of Public Works for Worth Office during the period barring the month from date to pass as the inspectors of water-meters, fifteen in all, for services rendered from August to December, averaging $100 per man each month; the Water Police, eighty-five in all, for work done from October to December, amounting to $250 to each man.

A large number of claims were presented and laid over under the rule. Among them were special claims against the Department of Public Parks for 1871, for various purposes.

The reports of the examiners do not cover a large number of claims, and those claims which are not properly vouched for, and which do not clearly appear right and correct, are rejected.

Mr. STRANGE said with regard to pay-rolls of painters and the lamp and gas men, that the Auditing Committee had been furnished with the affidavits of the laborers and superintendents, showing the amount of work done, and these circumstances could not be repeated, and he therefore moved that they be allowed. [Ayes, nine. The motion was carried.

Mr. BEADLEY, Ex-City Chamberlain, here appeared before the Board and asked permission to say a few words in vindication of his character, which, he said, had been assailed in a publication, he was alleged to have leased to the City. He knew nothing about until he heard that it had been disposed of by Mrs. CONNOLLY. The property does not belong to him now, and never did. He did not appear before the Board to argue this point, for he had sent his statement before the Board. Mr. BEADLEY, he said, was present in the building, and ready to come before the Board and state the transaction. The Press had given him daily notices gratuitously, assuming his character, and he only object in appearing before the Board was to vindicate himself to the public.

Mr. GREEN said that the claim for the lease was before the Auditing Committee, and would come up as its regular order.

The following-named payments were also audited and allowed: Officers and employees of the Finance Department in Comptroller's office; stenographers in the City Courts; inspectors of meters; Water Police; lamp-post painters; engineers, axmen and laborers of the Department of Public Works; and inspectors of street improvements.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ Investment when one is in search of a perfectly safe and highly profitable security, which can be obtained at a comparatively cheap, would do well to examine the claims of the First Mortgage 7 Per Cent. Land Grant Gold Bonds of the West Wisconsin Railway. These Bonds have only fifteen years to run, and are secured by a railroad already in successful operation, and by a land grant of 1,000,000 acres. Sold at 87½ and accrued interest in currency by WHITE, MORRIS & CO., 10 State-Street, and GIVENS, JOHNSON & DAVIS, No. 16 Wall-st., who will furnish pamphlets and particulars.

BANKING AND FINANCIAL.

☞ IMPORTANT TO INVESTORS AND HOLDERS OF A NEW-YORK, PHILADELPHIA AND WASHINGTON, PENNSYLVANIA, MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA, OHIO AND MISSISSIPPI, ILLINOIS AND MISSOURI, KENTUCKY AND TENNESSEE, NORTH CAROLINA AND SOUTH CAROLINA, GEORGIA AND FLORIDA, ALABAMA AND LOUISIANA, TEXAS AND CALIFORNIA, OREGON AND NEVADA, NEW-YORK AND NEW-JERSEY, NEW-YORK AND CONNECTICUT, NEW-YORK AND MASSACHUSETTS, NEW-YORK AND VERMONT, NEW-YORK AND MICHIGAN, NEW-YORK AND CANADA, NEW-YORK AND NEW-HAMPSHIRE, NEW-YORK AND MAINE, NEW-YORK AND WISCONSIN, NEW-YORK AND MINNESOTA, NEW-YORK AND KANSAS, NEW-YORK AND NEBRASKA, NEW-YORK AND DAKOTA, NEW-YORK AND UTAH, NEW-YORK AND ALASKA, NEW-YORK AND ALL THE STATES, TERRITORIES AND DISTRICTS, NEW-YORK AND THE WORLD.

The recent negotiations of NORTHERN Pacific Gold Bonds in LONDON, added to the previous LARGE SALES IN THE UNITED STATES, furnish reason for the completion of a large portion of the Road, and assure the EARLY AEROPTION OF THE REMAINDER OF THE LOAN.

These Bonds are issued in denominations of from $100 to $1,000 COUPON, and $100 to $10,000 REGISTERED, have thirty years to run, bear six interest of 7.30 per cent. in gold, and are EXEMPT FROM UNITED STATES TAX.

They are secured by a First and only Mortgage UPON 2,000 MILES OF RAILROAD, ITS FRANCHISES, AND ALL THE LANDS AND PROPERTY NOW POSSESSED BY THE COMPANY, OR WHICH IT MAY HEREAFTER ACQUIRE.

These Lands, on the completion of the Road, will be equal in extent to ALL THE NEW-ENGLAND STATES AND MARYLAND INCLUSIVE, and their value, taking the average of sales already made by other companies, will be over $200,000,000, or TREBLE the possible cost of the Road and issue of the Bonds.

The Bonds are offered at par and accrued interest in currency, and with their ample security and high rate of interest we believe there is no investment accessible to the people which is more profitable or safe.

☞ ST. JOSEPH AND DENVER CITY RAILROAD COMPANY'S FIRST MORTGAGE SINKING FUND LAND GRANT BONDS,

BEARING EIGHT PER CENT. (8 p. c.) INTEREST, PAYABLE IN GOLD, FREE OF TAX, AND IN DENOMINATIONS OF $1,000, $500 AND $100, can be obtained from the undersigned, or through the principal banks and bankers throughout the United States.

The attractive features of these securities are recognized in the fact that, although they have been but a short time on the market, they are nearly all absorbed, and but a small amount are now for sale.

They continue to perfect security with a liberal rate of interest. This interest accounts at State light for, and easily borne by, the Company, through the operation of the Sinking Fund, created from sales of the Company's land, which, in many cases, draw interest at the rate of fifty (50) per cent. per annum. The security behind them is ample in every particular, as they constitute a first and only mortgage on a trunk line of railroad which will soon connect the City of St. Joseph, Mo., the northernmost railway connection with the Union Pacific Railroad at Fort Kearney, materially shortening the distance between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. In addition to this, the bonds have further security in the fact that there is included in the Mortgage the Company's magnificent Lands, amounting to 1,000,000 acres, known to be among the best in the United States. The Mortgage Indenture provides the sale of these Lands at not less than Four (4) Dollars per acre, and payable to the Trustees under the Mortgage, for the clear and express purpose of retiring these Bonds. The amount thus realized exceeds the entire amount of Bonds which can be issued, and leaves the road, property and franchises free.

The Bonds have thirty years to run, with interest at Eight per Cent. free of tax, payable in February and August in each year.

Both principal and interest are payable in gold.

The principal in New-York. The interest in either New-York, London or Frankfort-on-the-Main, at the option of the holders, without notice, and in the gold currency of the country in which they are presented. They are coupon or registered.

Trustees—Farmers' Loan and Trust Company.

The present price of these Bonds is 87½ and accrued interest in currency, from Aug. 15, 1872. But they are receivable at par and accrued interest in payment for lands sold by the Company. The right is reserved to advance the present selling price without notice.

Maps, circulars, documents and full information furnished on application.

Though acting as agents for the sale of this loan, our firm buy and sell in their regular business the Bonds of the St. Joseph and Denver City Railroad Company, those of the Eastern Division (eight per cent. (8 p. c.) currently placed by us at 90, being now quoted at from 100½ to 101½ and accrued interest.

How long is a swindler to remain at the head of the Police force in this City? Will HORACE GREELEY turn his attention to that question?

The "arms investigation" has not "ruined Gen. GRANT," as SCHURZ—who is known as the "adventurer" in his own State—declared it would do. SCHURZ was the greatest toady any President ever had until he failed to get all the offices he wanted, and then he turned round and became a "patriot" and a "reformer." He is now trying to prove that Germany could bring claims for "constructive damages" against the United States, and that our Government was guilty of a gross outrage on international law. All the correspondents of all the "Anti-Grant" papers combine to "crack him up," to borrow DICKENS' phrase. If SCHURZ's relatives and SCHURZ's dependents had all been "properly provided for" at the expense of the people, we should have heard but little of SCHURZ's turgid fustian, called by the reporters "grand speeches."

It will be observed that in a very full meeting, and with but three dissenting votes, the Union League Club has indorsed the charter of the Committee of Seventy as amended and ordered to a third reading in the Assembly. This action comes very seasonably, to give still greater emphasis to the expression of public sentiment on Tuesday last, and it will, doubtless, have its due weight with members of the Legislature. The other resolutions against grants of public money for sectarian purposes, and against the receipt of illegal fees by public officers, are equally judicious and well-timed.

In the eloquent and interesting address of Vice-President COLFAX, delivered at Brooklyn last evening, our readers will find a timely quotation from the correspondence of Gen. WASHINGTON with THOMAS JEFFERSON, while the former was President of the United States. It will be seen from this correspondence that our first President, like our latest, in spite of his spotless purity of character and his priceless services to his country, did not escape the malice of his political enemies, and that his Administration, as well as his personal character and motives, were subject to the most scurrilous and abusive attacks from unprincipled foes. It speaks well for the candor, fairness and sense of justice of the American people of that era that they did not permit this gross abuse of the "Father of his country" to lessen their confidence in his integrity, or weaken their attachment to him and his Administration. The calumniators of Gen. GRANT will find, if we are not mistaken, that personal abuse of the President, or most unfounded and unjust attacks on his official conduct, will fall as powerless upon the American people of today as they did upon their fathers seventy-five years ago.

We observe that the Board of Audit has received and filed the claim of the Peekskill Gravel Company for $95,240 37, for gravel supplied to the SWEENY, HILTON & FIELDS [illegible] that in complaint [illegible] satisfactorily explained, the City was defrauded of about $25,000 under this gravel contract. Assemblymen HOSTER and PARKS were the leading spirits of the Gravel Company, and, according to the testimony of Judge HILTON, the gravel was purchased by Mr. VAN NORT or his purchasing clerk, Mr. BARRETT. It forms a beautiful illustration of the working of an official Board of Audit that Mr. VAN NORT should be expected to assist in deciding upon a doubtful claim contracted apparently by himself. The Assembly Ways and Means Committee, which is about to investigate the matter, may probably help the public to understand why the price of gravel rose fifty per cent. when SWEENY, HILTON and FIELDS assumed control of the parks, and fell fifty per cent. immediately after the old Commissioners were, practically, reinstated.

Senator Schurz.

The brunt of the recent movement in the Senate to fasten on our Government a violation of its neutrality, during the German war, has fallen from the first on Mr. CARL SCHURZ, of Missouri. In the very presentation of the preamble and resolution Mr. SUMNER aroused suspicion as to their origin by declaring, with emphasis, that they were in his "own handwriting." The inference was inevitable that if it was necessary to magnify that trivial fact it could only be in order to conceal the more important fact of the real authorship of the paper which the Massachusetts Senator may kindly have copied. This point was not long left to conjecture, for Mr. SCHURZ came to the rescue of the resolution, as soon as it was involved in the perils of an active and acrimonious debate, with a zeal and persistency which betrayed the feelings of a parent who had only trusted his offspring to other hands from motives of natural prudence. On the other hand, Mr. SUMNER, having presented the foundling to the Senate, clothed in his "own handwriting," abandoned it with almost unseemly haste to the care of its natural protector.

In this he did wisely. The distinguished Senator has few qualities that fit him to sustain a movement so palpably without foundation in fact, started with such a questionable purpose, and which a man who could not use it as a means of multiplying instructions against his enemies must abandon. Indeed, at the last, Mr. SUMNER did abandon it, and tried to withdraw the preamble which contains the substance of the charges, and which has afforded the only possible pretext for Mr. SCHURZ's long and ingenious political harangues. Perhaps it was with an uneasy suspicion of Mr. SUMNER's possible desertion of the subject that the Missouri orator hastened to take possession of it, and by constant interruptions, (he broke in on Mr. MORTON forty-six times in two hours,) as well as by set speeches, to establish a claim to attention, whatever Mr. SUMNER might do.

We wish Mr. SCHURZ great joy of his latest achievement. He has undoubtedly added considerably to his reputation as a ready debater, even though he has lost some of the reputation he previously enjoyed for candid and logical treatment of public questions. Whatever he has gained has been by means which are not attractive to the American people, who care far more that the men they trust in high places shall be faithful and sincere than that they shall have quick wit or an impudent tongue. Mr. SCHURZ has shown great attainments in that facility, which is as dangerous as a knack of imitating signatures. He has shown himself able to make ingenious suggestion assume the office of rational inference, and to produce appearances of evidence which, to have the effect of evidence, would only need that we should believe in the honesty of their author. If he has broken down badly in material parts of his purpose by misquoting documents, and by pretending that gossipy letters in a foreign journal are authentic and verbatim reports, he has only to thank for that his excessive courage, and Senator SCHURZ's courage is something which he finds it not improper to boast of in debate. If, moreover, he has been exposed as button-holing the attachés of foreign legations, to insinuate to them his suspicion that a Cabinet officer of his own Government falsified facts in his official reports, that was undoubtedly due to an un-American conception of what a gentleman and a Senator of the United States may properly do.

But these considerations will not avail Mr. SCHURZ before the American people. They are in the habit of making short work with excuses for acts that even savor of unpatriotic motive. Mr. SCHURZ threatens to leave the party if Gen. GRANT is renominated. He loses no opportunity of repudiating all party obligations. He affects to be superior to them. But the country will not allow that he is superior to that allegiance to its interests which, in letter and spirit, it requires of Democrats and Republicans alike. Mr. SCHURZ is not so indispensable to the Republican Party, or to the nation, that he can be indulged in breaking down the good name of the Government, impugning its good faith at the moment when reputation for good faith is most valuable to it, and putting weapons in the hands of the formidable contestant whom we are to meet before the arbitrators of Geneva. Though Mr. SCHURZ should convince us all that there is no legerdemain of debate, however artful, that he is not master of, and no reckleness of political warfare he is not ready to use against the President, we cannot, on that account, forget that in the heat of a partisan and personal quarrel he has passed the limits which bound the action of the patriotic citizen and the Senator sensitive to his country's honor. It is easy to see that Mr. SCHURZ has been sorely tempted and desperately pushed. His case was bad, and his personal conduct of the matter detestable. He was worried by men as able as himself, and left to fight a losing fight against great odds for a claim that involves his political future. All this may explain but it cannot [illegible] to injurious and unwarranted embarrassment the business of the Government of which he is a part.

The Charges Against Hank Smith.

Police Commissioner HANK SMITH stands charged with the following grave offenses:

I. As President of the Bowling-green Savings Bank, he testified, under oath that at the time of the bank's suspension it possessed twenty-five thousand dollars worth of New-York street improvement bonds. These were not found by the receiver among the assets of the bank.

II. Among the call loans of the bank appears the sum of $[illegible] 20 under names of persons who cannot be found. The Investigating Committee said they believed that "such loans purporting to have been made are fraudulent, and that the names are fictitious."

III. HANK SMITH authorized loans on worthless collaterals and loans without security, which involve a loss to the depositors of the Bowling-green Savings Bank of $88,441 97.

IV. In the bank report sworn to by HANK SMITH, the sum of $31,021 93, being a portion of the current expenses of the bank, is, with apparent intension to deceive, put down among the "loans" of the bank.

V. HANK SMITH was one of the three officials who drew money from the Guardian Savings Bank on the credit of the Bowling-green Bank and appropriated it for their own uses. The entire sum thus appropriated, including an over draft directly made on the funds held in trust, amounts to $64,736 75, and it stands at present as a claim against the Bowling-green depositors.

VI. His position as Police Commissioner enabled HANK SMITH to obtain possession of eighteen thousand dollars belonging to the widows and orphans of policemen killed in the discharge of their duty. This sum has been lost in the collapse of the Bowling-green Bank.

VII. The contributions of 2,800 policemen, amounting to thirteen thousand dollars, for the benefit of the sufferers by the Chicago fire, have never emerged from the custody of HANK SMITH's Bank.

VIII. HANK SMITH has, through corrupt influence, succeeded in evading, for about five years, payment of the rent of Pier No. 40 North River, leased to him by the Commissioners of the Sinking Fund. He has, so far, cheated the tax-payers out of $[illegible].

Yet, in spite of these uncontradicted charges, HANK SMITH continues to hold the position of Police Commissioner, and finds people professing to be honest ready to belittle the evidence of his guilt!

Austria and the North-West Passage.

Austria, of all civilized countries in the world, is to become a candidate for distinction in geographical discovery. In May she sends forth her own particular Polar expedition, and hopes to do her share toward making useful the glorious, but, save as stepping-stones, fruitless researches of ROSS, FRANKLIN and PARRY. One gentleman, Count WILDSCHECK, has given sixteen thousand dollars to the expedition, and promises ninety thousand dollars more if the Government, or other private individuals, fail to contribute it. The Vienna journals say, however, that there will not be the least difficulty on this score, and the requisite preparations are going on swimmingly. Such an effort as this is the more creditable since Austria cannot, in any event, hope to profit by Arctic discovery in the same degree as more maritime nations; while the scientific benefits that may result from success must necessarily be shared by the whole world in common.

It will be remembered that a German, if not an Austrian, attempt of like nature was made in 1869-70, and described in these columns. This expedition was led by Dr. PETERMANN and Herr KOLDEWEY, of Gotha. It consisted of two steamers, well provided for the daring experiment, but was unattended with success. The conclusion of the explorers was that the ice, forming an almost perpetual "pack" on the east coast of Greenland, rendered passage across the Arctic region by the North-west impossible. Dr. PETERMANN was, however, persuaded that, although his steamers could not get into it, there is a north-west passage, and that his observations, as published, have demonstrated its locality. The Austrian savans believe that between Nova Zembla and Spitzbergen there exists a vast open sea, and their Expedition means to try to get into it. This retreat is supposed to be filled with whales, who have there sought refuge from man's destructive rapacity, and that discovery is counted upon as one of the chief material advantages to be derived from the proposed attempt.

Thus, now by one nation and now by another, the long line of efforts to traverse the Pole is extended, and man, unterrified by hardship, or even by the most cruel and desolate of deaths, still obstinately persists in leaving no part of the planet he lives on unknown and unexplored. That these efforts will ultimately be crowned with success there is good reason to believe. First, because perseverance in almost anything except the search for the philosopher's stone or perpetual motion, usually does succeed; second, because each expedition that fails supplies the next with profitable data; and third, because the progress of science, notably in shipbuilding, the application of steam, the use of condensed food, &c., renders the facilities for penetrating into those frozen regions so much more extensive. Success may, indeed, be long deferred; but it is tolerably sure to be attained at last; and stranger things have happened in the world than would be the meeting this Autumn of the Austrian and American eagles in the open Polar Sea.

Another Legislative Committee.

The evidence before the Legislative Committee on Commerce with reference to the Commissioners of Emigration, has been closed somewhat abruptly. Still, it has brought out some items which throw a lurid light upon the secrecy and purity of Demo- [illegible] specially one item [illegible] he will [illegible] his eye for a few minutes [illegible] the City [illegible] Tompkins Market, Castle Garden, [illegible] Commissioners and their employes. In this few days, it appears that the Commissioners select MESS. HOSKINS and TOM CAHANY as the men who have the absolute right to handle immigrants' baggage. We doubt whether the Commissioners would like to trust their own property in such hands. This same man CAHANY had a contract for transporting sick emigrants from various parts of the City, for which he received about twenty-five dollars a head. But an inquisitive and reforming Commissioner having discovered the fact, it was reduced to a little over one-third that rate. It seems too that the business of the Board is conducted so loosely that, after a committee having the matter in charge had adopted the plan of a one-story pavilion hospital, the Chairman went on, and, without authority, erected a three-story building. The Board adopted a plan for a building to cost $250,000. They found too late that it would cost $750,000, and are now defending a suit for $24,000 fees arising out of their error. Mr. TWEED appointed a relative, one KING, the purchasing agent. He happened to be sick one day, and a Commissioner took his place. The difference in prices was so great that the Boss' relative had to retire to private life. It seems that one thoroughly competent physician was removed for political reasons, and an incompetent one put in his place. Dr. CARNOCHAN, not content with his base loss at Quarantine, took $3,500 a year as physician at Ward's Island, but has recently had to forego that.

One striking fact appears. The Commissioners of Emigration not only deem it right to use the money collected from poor emigrants in paying Postmaster JOHNS and Judge WATERBURY three thousand dollars apiece for lobby services at Albany, but they paid Gen. HILLYER six thousand dollars for lobby services at Washington, the object being to defeat the passage of a bill to place the care of emigration under the control of the General Government. All the industry and virulence of Senators CASSERLY and BAYARD failed to discern in the entire Custom-house any misappropriation of public funds at all approaching this in grossness. We call the particular attention of these sentlemen to the striking fact that two brief days' investigation of this Democratic Board have brought to light every one of the abuses which they assert exist in the Custom-house. There are, first, assessments on office-holders, and second, removals of competent men for political reasons and the substitution of incompetent ones, while the Quarantine investigation shows taxes imposed upon commerce greatly in excess of anything to be found in the Custom-house.

The Ring and Science.

Our readers who have visited the interesting grounds of the "Sydenham Crystal Palace" will remember the carefully-arranged and reconstructed groups of fossil animals in portions of the gardens. Here laboring men who have had no opportunity for book education, and children who are studying the physical history of the world, and all who are interested in the wonderful animal structures of past ages, can examine at their leisure the gigantic elephants and flying lizards, and immense sloths and crocodiles, as well as the smaller animals of former periods. The civilization and science of the world hold this study of ancient and extinct animals as one of the most instructive and important in the region of natural history. The successive genera of fossil animals show the order of the world's development, and reveal through what minute changes the refined and specialized structures of today have grown from the ruder and more generalized organs of those existing hundreds of thousands of years ago. They are the index of the world's growth and of the Divine action of creation through all its past history.

In a less philosophical view they interest every child and every student of nature, as showing that wonderful and gigantic creatures once crawled or waded or crept in places where now are crowded cities or smiling farms or busy factories. They show them better than hundreds of lectures or books what vast changes in climate and vegetation have passed over the earth's surface, since these immense and frightful animals inhabited the swamps and forests of our present continents.

We almost insult our intelligent readers by presenting the advantages of the study of paleontology. It was reserved alone in the civilized world for the Ring of New-York to manifest its public ignorance and contempt for the simplest principles of this science, as they have done for the simplest principles of morality and honor. Among those restored fossil animals in the Sydenham gardens were a number whose skillful restoration had excited the admiration of the most scientific geologists; and in the case of one, the ingenious restorer had anticipated the subsequent discovery of the missing bones, and had rebuilt the bony structure better even than Prof. OWEN was able to do. This skillful restorer of the extinct animals, though not himself a profound savant, was wisely judged, by the former Commissioners of our Central Park, as the proper person to add a scientific and instructive department to the sights of those grounds, in groups of reconstructed and native fossil animals, so that the children and visitors of the Park could here study something of the ancient history of the Continent of America.

The idea was an intelligent one, and Prof. HAWKINS set himself diligently to carry it out. He laboriously and expensively rebuilt, from the few bones discovered, some of our most curious saurians found in the lias of New-Jersey. One, our readers will remember, as exhibited in the lectures of the Association of Science, three years since—one of those nondescript animals of enormous size, who seem to unite the structure of the bird, the lizard and the kangaroo, discovered in New-Jersey. Prof. HAWKINS' reconstruction of this creature was extremely [illegible] be begun for [illegible] much curiosity to all visitors. There came, however, a change over the scientific report of the Park exhibitions. The Ring obtained control. HILTON and SWEENY could see nothing in paleontology; they record on their reports at the "so-called fossil animals," there was not only no life, but "no money in them." They shivved out the worthy and ingenious restorer, and dropped his recondite notions. They said they "had enough to do for the living animals in the Park, without having dead ones." To these two worthies, one fighting bull-terrier pup or lively black-and-tan rat-catcher were worth all the dead saurians and mastodons that ever encumbered a museum.

It appears now that the remarkable skeleton which we have spoken of as restored by Mr. HAWKINS, and which any museum in the world would have been proud to own, these leaders of the Ring caused to be broken up, and with other "useless bones," to be buried under the old Convent building, now used as offices. In money value these restored animals had cost the City some twenty or thirty thousand dollars, and now the laborious and ingenious work was broken up and thrown away like old rubbish. As objects of scientific discovery, these old bones were priceless. Nothing which has occurred under Ring administration shows better what vulgar and ignorant ruffians these millionaires and "Commissioners" were than this bit of vandalism. It was a deliberate insult—which they were too ignorant even to appreciate—to the civilization and science of the world.

Historic Frauds.

It should be a delight to Mr. GALTON, the author of Hereditary Genius, to discover that Sir CHARLES DILKE, the arch-agitator among the Anti-monarchists of England, is descended from the sister of a regicide. On the authority of BURKE—which is usually accepted as authentic—we learn that Sir CHARLES is a lineal descendant of Mr. FISHER DILKE, who married SIBELL WENTWORTH, sister of Sir PETER WENTWORTH, the regicide. Not precisely apropos, but still of current interest, comes the statement that the TICHBORNE family was also represented in the High Court of Justice that condemned CHARLES I. The representative was of a younger branch of the family, ROBERT TICHBORNE, first a linen-draper in the City of London, afterward a Colonel of the Parliamentary Army, and subsequently made Lieutenant of the Tower by Gen. FAIRFAX. He became Lord Mayor of London in 1656, under the appellation of "Sir ROBERT TICHBORNE, Skinner." He was held in favor by CROMWELL, and was on the Committee of State. At the restoration he became a prisoner in the Tower, and was tried for taking part in the trial of CHARLES I., and signing his death-warrant. The trial took place at the Old Bailey in 1660. TICHBORNE pleaded that he acted in obedience to Parliament, "in ignorance and without malice." His life was spared, but the rest of it was spent in captivity. Thus it seems there was once another famous Tichborne trial, the end of which, so far as the chief figure's incarceration is concerned, is likely to find modern repetition. In other words, the "claimant" in the present suit, unless more successful in establishing his identity than now seems probable, is pretty sure to wind up inside four walls, or at best to enjoy a temporary of his former extended experience in Australia.

Mr. Peabody's Gift to the London Poor.

The annual statement of the Trustees of the Peabody Donation Fund has just been published in London. It exhibits the condition of the Fund on Dec. 31, 1872. Under the original trust, five groups of buildings were created. These stand respectively in Spitalfields, Westminster, Chelsea, Shadwell and Islington; and they accommodate 600 families. Another site, held by the Trustees in Bermondsey, has not yet been built upon. The rents and investments of the first trust, after deducting all expenses, amounted at the close of last year to some £38,000; and this, added to the original fund of £150,000, makes the property £188,000, or nearly a million of dollars. Mr. PEABODY's second gift of £200,000 became available for building purposes in 1869; and to this, by the donor's bequest, will be added, in 1873, £150,000 more. Out of the former sum have been purchased a fine plot of ground at Chelsea, and the Magdalen Hospital Estate, so-called, at Blackfriar's-road. On the last named ground buildings have gone up that afford tenements for 300 families, "for which applications are largely in excess of the accommodation available." The trustees have profited by experience, and their new buildings contain many improvements on the older ones. The rents are not increased, but greater comforts and conveniences are obtained for the tenants, especially in the matters of water, heating, and ventilation.

It is gratifying to know that the Peabody Fund is in so flourishing a condition, and that the objects contemplated by the sagacious philanthropist, its donor, are steadily kept in view and faithfully carried out. Already nine hundred families of the laboring poor of London—no inconsiderable fraction of even that vast population—are provided with clean, healthy, and comfortable homes, at rents almost nominal, through the generosity of a single man; and the example is a wholesome one for contemplation and comment. Why is it that some of our New-York millionaires do not follow it? There are many who could well afford to do so; and why should they not, like Mr. PEABODY, enjoy the luxury of seeing the practical fruits of their benefaction during life? New-York is sadly in need of just what Mr. PEABODY did for London. The narrowness of the island, and the immense cost of the land, render the portion of wages devoted by working people to rent far greater, relatively, than it ought to be. If four men would seek do for New-York what Mr. PEABODY did for London, thus assuring cheap rents to five or six thousand families, the entire working population of the City would [illegible] in true income to the profit of speculators in real estate, but that is incidental to the performance of duty, that then the laboring classes should have a more reasonable proportion of their earnings wherewith to buy good food, clothes, and education.

When ground is once broken in this salutary direction—when one generous capitalist has come forward to do for working people generally, and on a large scale, what Mr. STEWART is said to intend with his women's tenement building—there is little fear but that others will soon follow the example. That they should do so would not be recommended by benevolence alone. Large property-holders, and, indeed, tax-payers in general, would be pretty sure in the long run to find their account in it. Clean, respectable homes are safe to turn out, in the average, good voters, and in the elevation of the voting working classes lies New-York's best hope for good government in the future.

Indians in New-Mexico.

The order of the War Department, which directs that the Apache Indians, in Southern New-Mexico, shall be removed to a reservation in the Tularosa Valley, has been received with much satisfaction by the law-abiding citizens of that Territory. The Tularosa Valley lies at a distance of about 120 miles from Silver City. It is surrounded by mountains, difficult of access, but having an abundance of all kinds of game. There is no settlement nearer to it than ninety miles, and for this reason it is especially favorable. Heretofore the Indians have suffered most from association with "mean whites," who have been driven thither to escape arrest for all manner of crimes. Mexicans of the worst class have been ever ready to suggest marauding expeditions, and to buy the plunder at a low price. They have even bought the rations from them on the day of issue, and have given bad whisky in part payment. These scoundrels are now endeavoring to prevent the Apaches from obeying the mandate of Secretary BELKNAP, and it is barely possible that there may be some trouble before the work has been accomplished. There are, altogether, some five thousand Indians in New-Mexico. Of this number the most intractable have been those residing at Canada Alamosa, a town which is almost exclusively inhabited by Mexicans. The correspondent of the Missouri Republican (Democratic) is honest enough to admit that the Indian policy of President GRANT has not only worked well in the past, but that it promises to save millions of money and hundreds of lives in the future. He believes that prompt punishment should be inflicted upon all Indians who leave the new reservation without permission, and all whites who approach nearer than the prescribed limits. During the past year, most of the Indian outrages have been perpetrated by the Apaches, and now that they are in a fair way to be well provided for and judiciously guarded, it is to be hoped that we have heard the last of their depredations.

MINOR TOPICS.

The World is in great tribulation because the Federal Constitution does not permit CARL SCHURZ to be elected President of the United States. It thinks our "revolutionary fathers," who framed the Constitution, perpetrated a "hideous anomaly" in excluding from the Presidential chair a "man of the same blood and nationality as the Baron STEUBEN." With all due respect to the World, we think "our revolutionary fathers" are excusable. In framing the Constitution they had in view general principles of national policy and expediency, and not the individual exceptions that might possibly arise. They did not, for instance, anticipate the contingency of the Democratic Party of 1872 taking among the renegades from the opposition ranks for a Presidential candidate, and forced in the extremity of selecting a "countryman of the Baron STEUBEN" in the person of CARL SCHURZ. Their mistake, or want of foresight, however, can easily be corrected if the people so will it; and as the Democratic Party is in want both of a platform and a candidate, we suggest that it go into the next Presidential canvass on this issue: "An amendment to the Constitution making all men of the same blood and nationality as the Baron STEUBEN, but particularly CARL SCHURZ, eligible to the Presidency." If they can't win on such an issue, aided by the entire German vote of the country, which SCHURZ says he carries in his pocket, they may as well give it up and let the Constitution remain as our "revolutionary fathers" framed it.

A Vienna medical journal gives an account of a marvelously tattooed man. He is an Albanian, very finely formed and about forty years old. Having get into trouble with the authorities of a district of Chinese Tartary, while working a gold mine in that country, he was condemned to be tattooed. The operation was, of course, terribly painful. It lasted three hours a day during three months. When the man is stripped it appears as though his body was tightly enveloped in a webbing of rich Turkish stuff. From head to foot he is covered with dark blue figures of animals and plants. On the forehead are two panthers in attitudes which would be heraldically described as "rearedant." There are no fewer than 366 figures on the body. The skin is now perfectly smooth, and the perspiration is unimpeded. This remarkable person is now at Vienna, but will presently proceed to Berlin and London, and not improbably we shall have him here. Perhaps Mr. BARNUM already has entered into negotiation with him. He speaks eight languages. Had the tattooing on the Tichborne claimant, who is reported to be ornamented in this way, only been as well done, the proof of identity might have been simplified.

Several of the leading London lawyers are among the most devout of the sons of the Church of England. Lord HATHERLEY, the Lord Chancellor, is author of an able work on the evidences of Christianity. Sir BENJAMIN PARKE's Book of Proofs is almost as well known as Hymns Ancient and Modern, and now Sir JOHN COLERIDGE, Attorney-General, whose name we all now know so well in connection with the Tichborne claimant, has edited A Mirror for Monks, being a companion volume to the work of THOMAS A. KEMPIS. This remarkable person is now at Vienna, but will presently proceed to Berlin and London, and not improbably we shall have him here. Perhaps Mr. BARNUM already has entered into negotiation with him. He speaks eight languages. Had the tattooing on the Tichborne claimant, who is reported to be ornamented in this way, only been as well done, the proof of identity might have been simplified.

Several of the leading London lawyers are among the most devout of the sons of the Church of England. Lord HATHERLEY, the Lord Chancellor, is author of an able work on the evidences of Christianity. Sir BENJAMIN PARKE's Book of Proofs is almost as well known as Hymns Ancient and Modern, and now Sir JOHN COLERIDGE, Attorney-General, whose name we all now know so well in connection with the Tichborne claimant, has edited A Mirror for Monks, being a companion volume to the work of THOMAS A. KEMPIS. The position taken, in explanation of the publication, that the Roman translation, published in Paris in 1670, has [illegible] become extremely rare. The work has great merit. It is pleasant to see a man like Sir JOHN, renowned as lawyer and politician, finding time for and pleasure in such quotidian. Hon. DAVID DUDLEY FIELD, over a vintage from the mansion of Brie, and the late Col. FISK's affairs, in similar gastronomic, we wonder?

The whilome "Eldest Son of the Church" being at a loose end, and in heretic England, M. THIERS seems anxious to assume the part. He is reported to have lately offered the Papacy asylum in France, and he shows an unmeasurable hardness by no means grateful to the Italian Government, about dispatching a representative to the Court of VICTOR EMMANUEL, although he is duly represented at the Vatican. Inasmuch as all the other leading Powers have sent an Ambassador to VICTOR EMMANUEL, the omission on the part of France is very marked.

English capitalists who so kindly advanced one hundred thousand pounds, sterling, to Ex-President ROYE, of the Liberian Republic, are likely to have a hard time getting either principal or interest. ROYE, it seems, is a native of Newark, Ohio, and a graduate of the High School in which Chief-Justice CHASE occupied the position of Principal. He emigrated to Liberia in 1846, and having considerable ability, soon succeeded in acquiring an independence by mercantile pursuits. He was the first Liberian who exported goods from Europe and America in his own ship, and from his enterprising spirit, so gained upon the good will of his countrymen that he was their first choice for President as soon as it was known that President ROBERTS desired to retire to private life. It is a hopeful sign for the future well-being of Liberia that this bold man was not able, even with the aid of foreign gold, to trample upon the liberties of the people. His successor, who was also his predecessor, is a man of modest demeanor, and unites in his character many Christian virtues. During his visit to this country in 1869, he spoke at missionary meetings in several of the churches in New-York and other cities, making everywhere a very favorable impression upon his hearers. As latest news, the would-be Dictator, ROYE, was yet in prison, charged with high crimes, and in view of the interminable hostilities that have been carried on by exiled leaders like CABRAL, of San Domingo, his speedy trial and condemnation would appear to be the most effectual way to prevent a series of these revolutions and counter-revolutions which have been the bane of the South American Republics.

The Parisian mind is reported to have been somewhat unpleasantly exercised lately by the removal of a very interesting relic familiar to the habitués of that city. Thus was a splendid piece of BERNARD PALISSY's art, being the sign over his house—representing the struggle of Hercules with the Nemean lion—which, it is stated, had, through all the changes and chances of Parisian life, remained intact. This piece of workmanship has been regarded as one of the finest works of the renowned inventor, whose untiring energy, during sixteen years of disappointed effort, has been recorded in so interesting a manner in the Prosecutions of Madame Palissy. PALISSY died about 1589. The work of art we have alluded to is stated to have been bought by an Englishman, and taken to London.

The Swiss Republic is revising its Constitution, and important alterations are being made. The Senate, or Städerath, has adopted without change an article of the revised Constitution as it passed the Lower House. By this, the period of liability to military service, which was from twenty to thirty-two, is extended to forty-four. Another important step is the concentration of military authority. This is now transferred from the cantons to the Federal Government. The Swiss forces, including army of the reserved and Landwehr, amounted in 1869 to two hundred thousand men. There seems no general tendency to make many sweeping alterations, so far, at least, as civil affairs are concerned, and many radical proposals have been rejected by large majorities. The Constitution in course of revision only dates from 1849.

Entertaining the Poor.

In a City, like New-York it requires but little perspicuity to discover a field whereon we may exercise our benevolence and benefit those in less fortunate circumstances than ourselves. Although much is being done to benefit the deserving poor, still the cry comes up from the "Bowery," "Mulberry," "Cherry," "Water," "Hook" and "Dutch Hill," as from Macedonia of old, "Come over and help us." Along the fashionable avenues the wintry wind daily wafts from those miserable neighborhoods the cry of help to a day's work, a coat-of gar

NEW-MEXICO.

Spring Sports at Fort Stanton—Mescalero Indians, the Indian Chief Rodondito.

From Our Own Correspondent.

FORT MCRAE, NEW-MEXICO, Saturday, Feb. 8, 1873.

At length Winter is over. It lasted four days, during two of which the ground was covered with snow, and the mercury at one time descended to 8° above zero. Tomorrow the plowman breaks ground on Patterson's Ranch. During this month all early vegetables will be planted, and the season of Mexican work, which lasts about four months, commences. Notwithstanding the increased production resulting from the use of the steel plow and cultivator, scarcely any Mexicans have been induced to use them. They look upon them with a certain amount of superstition, and I have heard that their priests have in some localities forbidden their use. Under the old system the Mexican who can produce enough to pay his debt to the merchant, his tithe to the priest, and have enough left to "tread him" the rest of the year, is considered in comfortable circumstances. A surplus would be simply superfluous. During the water-melon season, which lasts from July to October, the average Mexican laborer lives almost exclusively on melons, and, strange to say, they appear to prefer them green—that is, unripe—eating them close to the rind. With such a population of farmers, there is little to hope from agriculture in New-Mexico, although along the streams the land is exceedingly fertile. The country is better adapted for stock raising than for any other branch of farming. It is covered with fine pasture, which in the Fall cures on the stalk; so that the pasture lasts the year around. The profits of sheep-raising are enormous, but on account of Indian depredations there are but few sheep-owners in the Territory.

Cattle raising is less profitable, and still more precarious in the neighborhood of Indians, but it only requires a settlement of the Indian question and railroad transportation to give immense profits. The item of feed, which makes up the bulk of expense in the East, is here left entirely out of account. Cattle turned out on the plains through the Winter will be rolling fat in the Spring, without a pound of grain or shelter of any kind. The native cows are a mixture of Texan, Mexican and States cattle. The Mexicans believe that if the calf dies the mother's milk will immediately dry up; and so when they wish to keep a cow in milk they preserve the calf, allowing it to suckle the cow daily. As a general thing, butter and milk being no object to Mexicans, they allow the calf to run with the cow and take all her milk.

The silver mines of New-Mexico are being rapidly developed, and nothing but capital to be invested in quartz mills is now wanted. New leads of remarkable richness are frequently found in the Silver City mines, near Las Cruces, where they have several mills at work on the ore. The Pueblo mines, near Socorro, although but a recent discovery, promise well. Many valuable leads have been opened; the ore provering to be very rich. A vein of galena, about fifty feet wide, has lately been discovered, which contains a large percentage of silver—it is said to yield sixty per cent of silver and lead—a ton of which contains $600 of silver, the residuum being pure lead. For the present, on account of the depth of snow, all "prospecting" is suspended.

Since my last letter nothing of importance has transpired at the Indian Agency at Canada Alamosa, but I have no more cheering news than I gave you then. COCHISE has removed his band about eighteen miles from the Agency, having selected a position that makes him master of the situation in case of trouble. In his dealings with the Agent he is insolent and overbearing. At the last issue day he demanded an issue of cousin, which the Major refused, whereat COCHISE, in a great rage, exclaimed: "The muata (muslin) is here for me, and I am going to have it. I have men enough to take it." To which the Major quietly responded: "Try it." This advice was not followed by COCHISE, who sullenly retired with his men to an adjoining hill, and it is said discharged their rifles in the direction of the Major's quarters. LOCO, another chief, also shows signs of disaffection, but VICTORIA, who commands a large band, reported to the Major during the difficulty with COCHISE, and told him that he and his men would fight for him if necessary. It is the opinion of many people here that COCHISE's peace is insecure, and only a clever dodge to secure Gen. CROOK and recruit his band from Uncle Sam's commissary for the coming Spring campaign. The orders to remove to Tularosa, the new Colyer reservation, having been postponed until April, it will just suit COCHISE's convenience if he should prefer to take the war path in settling at Tularosa. The many changes that have been made in orders regarding the Apaches have had a bad effect on them, and they openly charge the agent with lying to them whenever a change in the policy of the Government is announced. Mexicans who associate with them say that the Indians think the Government is afraid of them, and that they will yet have their own way about the reservation. A report has just reached the fort that the Apaches have stolen four hundred goats from the hacienda of Polomas, a town on the Rio Grande, SIXTEEN miles from this place.

News from the Revolutionary Districts—Miscellaneous News—Personal Intelligence.

From Our Own Correspondent.

HAVANA, Saturday, Feb. 17, 1873.

Gossip concerning the war is all the news I have to transmit. The gun-boat Astuto captured a boat containing three sailors and seven Cubans, who were leaving the interior for Jamaica, somewhere near Guantanamo. Among the Cubans captured is a Mr. CODINA, formerly a merchant of Manzanillo, and who, according to Spanish reports, has been an active blockade-runner since the war, bringing mails, arms and ammunition for the Cuban forces from Jamaica. The prisoners were taken to Manzanillo for identification and trial....The telegraph line from Puerto Principe to Guaimaro is finished.... FRANCISCO RAMIREZ ALMANZA and MANUEL AYALA were tried for treason at Puerto Principe, and executed on the 6th....The formidably statement published by the Spanish War Office gives 136 Cubans killed, 61 prisoners, and 700 persons of all sexes and ages surrendered, 98 horses, 74 firearms, and 149 other arms captured during the same period. Of the 136 Cubans killed, over half met their fate in the jurisdictions of Sancti Spiritus and Moron, which fact proves that a considerable number of Cubans in arms still exist in that jurisdiction, notwithstanding the assertions of the Spaniards to the contrary, and also that the immense number of Spanish troops in the Eastern and Central Departments have inflicted but slight and unimportant damage upon the revolutionary forces. The Spanish loss in the same official statement is given as eleven Spaniards killed, forty-seven wounded, and eight soldiers bruised. We must take the word of the chief of staff for the correctness of the above statements, as other information of a reliable character is very difficult to obtain.... The Spanish guerrillas killed the Cuban Col. MANUEL MENIS FAYAS and five of his men, near Conga de Avila....A correspondent of the Diario de la Marina, writing from Sancti Spiritus, says the successes of the Spanish commander are mainly due to the excellent system of espionage and betrayal organized by Col. ARANO, and also the case of the capture of the Cuban Colonel, ARIOSA, who was subsequently executed, and of the killing of the Cuban Major-General, MATEO CARMONA, by Capt. PESADA at the exercises, both being natives of Villa Clara, and formerly intimate friends. Several engagements have taken place in the Central Department with the forces of SANCHEZ VILLAVEZ, and IGNACIO AGRAMONTE; Dr. LOAGA, of the Cuban Army, and AGRAMONTE's Adjutant, were wounded during one of these fights....The Spanish General, ARPUDIA, found the hospital, where the sick men of Gen. VICENTE GARCIA were under treatment, in his report Gen. ARPUDIA does not mention anything of taking any male prisoners, but names forty-six women and children, and reports having killed four menpuestos. It is, therefore, evident that the Pico killed some throughout the Results of the Congressional Investigation—The Exposures of Fraud and Corruption.

From Our Own Correspondent.

NEW-ORLEANS, Thursday, Feb. 13, 1873.

The Congressional Investigation Committee were in session here for two weeks, and during that time examined in all over fifty witnesses concerning the difficulty between the two contending factions of the Republican Party. The evidence elicited a vast amount of corruption in the Legislature, which have been in this State, commencing with that of 1868, and composed principally of disenfranchised Confederates. That bribery, fraud, peculation and plunder exists in the legislative and other departments of this State cannot be denied, for it has been established upon the oaths of credible witnesses. The State is now reeling under the heavy burden of debt and taxation which has been put upon it by unscrupulous adventurers, assisted by bond patriots who were but too willing to enjoy the fruits of the treason, though they hated the traitors. There were many very ugly facts brought out before the Investigation Committee, which militated against the leaders of both of the two factions of the so-called Republican Party, so that none of them can hope to obtain the confidence of the people in the Fall election, though Gov. WARMOTH anticipates a renomination, and, through the peculiar machinery of the Registration and Election laws which exist, to be re-elected for another term. The people of this city and throughout the State appear to be thoroughly aroused, and seem to be impressed with the importance of a combination of all the honest electors in favor of reform, and the utter overthrow of the men who are now in power, and who have fattened and grown rich out of their schemes of plunder and peculation. The masses of the colored citizens have also become disgusted with the course pursued by the men who call themselves Republicans, and though thoroughly Republican in their views and sentiments, they are shrewd enough to discriminate between the honest and dishonest men of the party, and when the time comes will unite with the reformers of their party to secure the election of good men to office.

The system which prevails under Gov. WARMOTH, of giving to favorites a number of offices, so that the most valuable are in the hands of a few personal friends, is not calculated to please old Republicans who have borne the heat and burden of the day for his success and that of the party, and this has caused a large defection from his side. He is a young man of inordinate ambition, and believes that his destiny is to win, without regard to whether his course is right or wrong. The testimony taken before the Investigation Committee injured him; notwithstanding, his manner in the two days that he gave his evidence was self-possessed, and apparently frank and disingenuous. When he had concluded his statements before the Committee, they seemed to be favorably impressed with what he said, and with all that had been done by him in relation to the late troubles, but some of the later evidence appeared to affect his credibility in some of the material points made by him, especially in connection with the Convention of last August. At the conclusion of the examination of the witnesses, the Committee appeared to be perfectly satisfied that the National Administration were entirely without fault in any of the transactions concerning which they were sent to investigate. Of some of the Government officials it may be said that they were not blameless in what was done by them, but they acted from the best of motives, and without any intention of involving the Government in any of their doings. Especially Marshall PACKARD showed that his course was such as any honorable and upright official might and did take for the best interests of the party of which he is one of its most active members. His appearance before the Committee was that of an honest, truthful and just man, and he was believed in all that he said on his examination. As an official, not a single charge can be brought against him, and his record will be found different from some of his predecessors, especially Gen. F. J. HERRON, who is charged with being a defaulter to the Government for some $40,000. In relation to the payment of Confederate debts by the State officials, it was shown before the Committee that one known as the Weil claim, for $146,000, was settled by the Fiscal Agent, Mr. J. G. GAINES, the President of the Citizens' Bank, much after the manner in which your Mayor HALL allowed the Tweed gang to steal from the City Treasury. Of this claim Mr. WEIL, the owner of it, received only $16,000, while the remainder is said to have been divided between Senator ANDERSON, a Democratic Senator, and somebody who shall be nameless. The Fiscal Board consisted of Gov. H. D. WARMOTH, Auditor JAMES GRAHAM, and Mr. GAINES, and each of them exculpated, in regard to this little affair, charge the fault of its payment upon each other, neither desiring the load of responsibility. During the time when the excitement was at its height, occasioned by the Carter-Warmoth fund, from the 3d to the 16th of January last, the checks of Secretary of State HERRON were as thick as leaves in Vallambrosa among the members of the State Senate and House of Representatives, and this greatly aided the cause of his superior and master.

OFFICE OF THE COMMISSIONERS OF EMIGRATION OF THE STATE OF NEW-YORK, CASTLE GARDEN, NEW-YORK, Feb. 22, 1873.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In the editorial article published in yesterday's TIMES headed "Hints to a Reformer," there are one or two errors which I am sure through your columns to correct. I did not say that I had been assessed $600 by Tammany Hall, but that I had made a voluntary contribution of that sum, as has always been my habit to the party with which I am in accord. Nor did I say that the other officials had been assessed $100 each, but various sums from $100 down. Some declined to pay the assessment, as I stated, but were not removed in consequence. It is a mistake also to suppose that the presence of assessments beneath under the present Board. Since last assessments have been repeatedly levied on employees of the Department by the Republican State Central Committee, or some member of it. This seemed, I think, as often as six times between 1863 and 1867.

AMUSEMENTS.

GERMAN THEATRE.

"Der Freischütz" was sung last evening at the German Opera-house. Herr BANDLER represented Kaspar, Mme. WERNIGK Agathe, and Miss ELSEN Annchen. The performance of the little lady has merited and has only been received in consideration. Miss ELSEN delivered the poetry song at the close of act the second with much pregnancy and taste. To-night, Mme. FARNER and Herr MULLER will be heard in "Lucrezia Borgia."

MILLS-BARASATE MATINEES.

The fourth of the series of matinées given at Steinway's smaller hall by Messrs. MILLS and BARASATE, is to take place to-morrow. Mme. JEOCHEN BREWER will be the vocalist. Among the prominent lines of a bill intended to combine popularity with elegance are noticeable ALARY's intensive air-theme from "Mazaniello," and an arrangement of "Home, Sweet Home," by Señor BARASATE, both pieces being assigned to this accomplished violinist; TAUSSIG's "Caprice Waltz," for interpretation by Mr. MILLS, and a grand duo on Rossini's "Otello," which is to call into requisition the talent of the two artists.

ATTRACTIVE SUNDAY CONCERT.

A concert of special attractiveness is to occur at the Grand Opera-house on Sunday evening next. The operatic star spirit of Messrs. J. H. TOOKER, H. S. JACKSON and J. W. MORRISSEY has resulted in the engagement, for the single occasion only, of the Ninth Regiment Band, of the whole Maretzek-Rabbori opera troupe, of Mr. LEVY, the cornet-player, and of Miles. CASTELLAN and DE TEY. The programme these performers are fitted to interpret could scarcely be excelled in comprehensiveness, and we doubt not that it has been arranged to the best advantage of the executants. The exceptional character of the affair will surely act to overbalance.

PHILHARMONIC REHEARSAL.

The last rehearsal but one previous to the Philharmonic concert which will be given on to-morrow evening next, takes place at the Academy of Music, this afternoon.

OFFICIAL LIST

THE FRENCH PLAYS.

Robinson Hall, in Sixteenth-street, near Union-square, was crowded last evening when the second performance of a series of French representations occurred. Three pieces were acted, "Fait de que fait," the patriotic work of M. COPPEE, the piece of the first entertainment, and was referred to in these columns, subsequently, as a charming and eloquent composition. Its realist, yesterday, was much improved by the increased familiarity of the artists with their lines, and its impressiveness was acknowledged by enthusiastic applause. "Roch et Loc" and "Un Service à Blanchard" were the additional pieces selected for rehearsal. Both are one-act comedietta, in which slight stories are unfolded with as much skill, illustrated with as many capital situations, and amplified by such sparkling dialogue, as to supply a representation unique in this City at the present writing. As on the first night, MM. JULIENET, ROMBAUD, DUSVILLE and LEONARD and Miles. CAYE, TAILLEFER, and DEAUSSY were the artists. On Monday next, the same company will appear in "Le Mauvier de Théodore," one of the most amusing comedies of the modern repertory. We wish M. JULIENET and his associates for that occasion and for after affairs a more prudent orchestra. We must not omit to mention that during the progress of last evening a collection was made to swell the fund for paying the Prussian war debt of the mother country. Two hundred and sixty-seven dollars were the result of a quite undertaken, of course, by members of the fair sex well qualified for the task by their personal attractions.

UNION-SQUARE THEATRE.

At the Union-square Theatre, several novelties are now offered, and attract large audiences. In addition to the usual comic business of the negro delineators and to Mr. RUS WILLIAMS' Dutch character songs, the management has strengthened its company by the engagement of Mr. E. D. DAVIES, the ventriloquist. Mr. DAVIES is undoubtedly one of the leading artists in his line, and his performances elicit deserved applause. Unlike other ventriloquists, the performer never conceals his features from the audience, and thereby adds vastly to the mysterious charm of his entertainment. The burlesque of "Unruly Dick" with Mr. M. W. FISKE as Richard III., concludes each representation, amid much merriment. Miss JENNIE KIMBALL, Miss LAURA LE CLAIRE and Miss JENNIE WALTERS appear with Mr. FISKE.

Card from Mr. John F. Richards.

Mr. JOHN F. RICHARDS, in the following card, denies in toto the allegations and insinuations of the Depositors' Committee of the Market Savings Bank, as given to our reporter, and published in yesterday's TIMES. We have no doubt, from facts which have come to our knowledge, that gross injustice has been done to Mr. RICHARDS in the matter. He has never had any direct connecting with the management of the bank, and his name was simply used as giving apparent strength to a really rotten institution. Mr. RICHARDS' honorable character as a business man precludes the idea that he would knowingly have been a party to any imposition or fraud whatever:

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In your paper of today I noticed a report (the second or third of a series of a similar character) in reference to myself and my alleged connection with the Market Savings Bank. A larger number of misstatements, and of a more unjustifiable character, could scarcely be crowded into the same space. A brief statement on my part will show how unwarrantable, and probably malicious, those statements are. In the year 1867, and at least five years before that bank was organized, I opened the Belmont Hotel in Fulton-street, on my own capital and credit. My business was from the opening successful and prosperous. On account of my standing in the community as a business man, I suppose, I was requested to become a trustee of the Market Savings Bank about five years ago, and a long time after the bank was started. Having confidence in the officers and trustees of the bank, I consented. In this I was, perhaps, unwise, as I never knew and never pretended to know anything about the banking business. I have never had any voice in the control or management of the bank, or in the investment of its funds, except in a few instances to serve on some committee, in reference to matters which had previously been arranged by the officer through whose criminality the ruin of the institution was effected.

I have never been a borrower of its funds, nor in any manner interested in its investments, nor is it pretended by any one that I am directly or indirectly indebted to the bank to the amount of a single dollar.

In reference to my horses, carriages, and style of living, I have only to say that my expenses have at no time within the past ten years exceeded one-third of my income.

As to the alleged disposition of any of my property for the purpose of avoiding my liabilities, such statement is utterly untrue. I am advised and believe that I am in no manner legally liable for the losses of the bank, but if the Courts should otherwise determine, I am, as all of my friends and acquaintances well know, abundantly able to respond for all of my debts and obligations.

JOHN F. RICHARDS.

ST. GEORGE'S HOTEL, NEW-YORK, Feb. 22, 1873.

Large Sale at Taylor's Stock Farm.

A sale of A. H. TAYLOR'S trotting stock took place yesterday, at Highland Mills, Orange County. Good prices were realized. Out of the fifty-five horses offered, thirty-six were sold, realizing nearly $8,000. There seems to be a disposition on the part of the Orange County breeders to dispose of their stock for the purpose of introducing a little new blood, their horses having been bred to such an extent as to threaten a serious deterioration.

Stabbing Affray.

JOHN PATRILLA and MICHAEL ROSA, both Italians, became engaged in a quarrel at No. 97 Mulberry-street yesterday afternoon, during which ROSA stabbed PATRILLA in the abdomen with a stiletto, inflicting a serious wound. PATRILLA was carried for at the Park Hospital, and ROSA was locked up at the Franklin-street Police Station to await the result of the injury.

A quarrel occurred yesterday afternoon between MATTHEW O'CONNELL, aged fourteen, of No. 9 Clarkson-street, and EDWARD SCHAEFER, of the same place, in which the latter was stabbed in the back with a pocket-knife. The wound was not dangerous. SCHAEFER, it appears, was the aggressor. O'CONNELL was taken to his home, and SCHAEFER was locked up at the Leroy-street Station.

THE COMMON AND THE STATE.

Resolutions of the Committee of Seventy—Action of the Union League Club—Assembly Committee.

A special meeting of the members of the Union League Club was held last evening at the Club-house in Fifth-avenue, when the following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The Committee of Seventy, in their address of yesterday, have outlined the way of a reform of those intolerable evils of government, not only to the citizens of New-York, but to the inhabitants of the whole State and Union; therefore,

Resolved, By this Union League Club that the Legislature be requested to pass the following reforms without a full revision of the Charter, changes to cost, but without the power to create additional indebtedness in their behalf, namely: Reduce the number of Aldermen, Assistant Aldermen and twenty-four other officers of the government. That this Club is in favor of the passage of the Amendment of the Constitution of the State, shall pass the one of adopting the Constitution of the State. The method adopted in the system of two consecutive years. The appointment of public officers by the Governor, Senate and Assembly, and of the judicial officers, prescribe a term of study and discipline free from contamination of the political world, and shall commend themselves to the public mind. Shall commend themselves to the public mind. Shall commend themselves to the public mind.

VIRGINIA.

Contemptuous Witness—How the Sinecure Bolt Simmer—Congressional Investigation—Negro Sinecure Officers Commissioned at Large—Burgary, Forgery, Robbery and Murder.

From Our Own Correspondent.

RICHMOND, Va., Monday, Feb. 19, 1872.

This Legislature of Virginia is a most industrious body—at least in does many ridiculous things. Among those industrious measures is the whole action taken in regard to the investigation into the alleged forgery and corruption connected with the passage of the Funding bill by the last Legislature. The House emphatically ordered the investigation to be made, and appointed a committee with power to send for persons and papers. The Committee went to work and had several witnesses before them. The most promising of these was Col. JOHN W. JENKINS, a lawyer by profession, who fully stated to the Committee that he had been employed by a certain party representing bondsmen of Virginia bonds, to "lobby" the Funding bill through the last General Assembly; but when asked to disclose the name of his client and the amount of the fee he received, he positively refused. All that could be got out of him in regard to his client was that that individual was from the City of New York, and was, he believed, a banker or broker. The Committee made report of this hitch in their proceedings, and the House held that the questions were proper, and that Col. JENKINS was in contempt, ordering him into the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms. He was brought to the bar of the House two or three times, where he likewise refused to answer the questions which had been propounded to him by the Committee, and he was finally allowed to make a speech to the House in his defence. The speech was not eloquent, nor its arguments strong, but the House suddenly voted to release the contumacious JENKINS, and discharged the Investigating Committee. The reason alleged for this is that the House had no jurisdiction over the matter under investigation, and that consequently there was no right to question Col. JENKINS, or any one else about it, which was to imprison him when he declined to answer. So ended a farce that should never have begun unless it was resolved to carry it further.

The House bill repealing so much of the Funding bill as makes coupons receivable for taxes and other public dues, still hangs in the Senate, with very little probability that it will pass. A joint resolution, having a similar effect, was passed by the House before Christmas, but it has never been acted on by the Senate yet. If this House bill should get through the Senate the Governor will veto it, and there is a strong probability that it can then pass both Houses over the veto. The real difficulty of the situation is that the State officials hold that an Appropriation bill is required to authorize them to pay interest under the Funding bill, and it will be hard, if not impossible, to get such a bill through, certainly not for more than three per cent. this year.

The Conservatives have arranged a fine plate to carry under the Congressional representation of Virginia, under the new apportionment, by which this State has nine Representatives. The plan has been carefully worked out by a caucus committee, and a leading Conservative paper of this city openly boasts that the scheme will give the Conservatives seven out of the nine districts. Especial pains have been taken with this district so as to oust Hon. CHARLES H. PORTER, (Republican,) and the prospect appears here by factoring to Conservative aspirants that many of them are already in the field seeking the position. Among these eager and hopeful gentlemen are Hon. RALEIGH T. DANIEL, Chairman of the Conservative State Executive Committee, who became famous in 1869 by his celebrated telegram congratulating President GRANT on the triumph of the "Walker movement" in Virginia, who was elected member of Congress for the State at large in 1869, but was not allowed a seat, and who is now a member of the House of Delegates; Col. WM. S. GRIMSON, a journalist, formerly of the Whig, and more recently of the Enquirer, of this city, who is now in the House of Delegates; Col. J. K. CONNOLLY, a one-armed Confederate hero, who now represents Richmond in the Senate, and LOUIS H. FRAZIER, Vice-President of the National Tobacco Association, and who was a member of the last House of Delegates. There are many more, however, and there is likely to be a fierce scramble among them. Mr. FRAZIER already announces that he will spend ten thousand dollars to secure his election. A nominated, One of the districts, (the Fourth,) said to be Republican, is understood to have been arranged for the behoof of M. L. BOWLES, (colored,) a member of the State Senate from Sussex County. Next to having a Conservative elected, the Conservatives desire a colored Republican elected.

In the Senate here is now pending a bill to charter the New York and Norfolk Railroad Company. The capital stock is not to exceed $3,000,000, and the road is to run "from some point on the Virginia and Maryland boundary line, in Accomac County," on the eastern shore of Virginia, "to some point on the Chesapeake Bay, in Northampton County, and thence by steam ferry to the port of Norfolk, or by ferry to some point in Norfolk or Princess Anne Counties, and thence by railroad to the port of Norfolk." Under the fourth section of the bill the Company will be authorized to own and navigate steam and other vessels necessary for the ferry, may operate a telegraph line, and carry on an express business, between the City of New York and other places, on its own line. The bill authorizes the Counties of Accomac and Northampton to vote subscriptions to the road, the former not more than three hundred thousand dollars, and the latter not more than two hundred thousand dollars. This road will connect with roads already in existence, and will make the most direct line between Norfolk and New-York, through Eastern Virginia and Maryland, Delaware and New-Jersey. The plan looks well, at any rate.

After long install and many a rude rebuff, the officers of the colored volunteer militia company of this city, known as the "Attucks Guard," were today commissioned by Gov. WALKER, and the company will be soon mustered in and armed, although it will for the present be designed to be regiment, (there is at present only one company in Virginia,) and hereafter be known as "The Attucks Guard" takes its name from CRISPUS ATTUCKS, a colored man of Framingham, Mass., who happening to be in Boston, March 5, 1770, when the popular attack on the British soldiery resulted in the Boston Massacre, joined the attacking party, and was among the first who fell beneath the fire of the assaulted military. The officers of the company have repeatedly sought to obtain commissions, but were always refused, because their certificates of examination lacked the signature of one of the Board of Military Examiners of this District, Gen. JAMES H. LANE. Recently Gen. LANE has been removed from the Board, (his own request,) and his successor has proved more pliant. Last week the Board examined these officers most rigidly, subjecting them to tests which had not been applied to any other officers, while the candidates came out of the ordeal most successfully. The Board unanimously concur in the certificate, and award these colored officers high credit for their efficiency.

I have cautioned that colored people are excluded from the public houses here, but they generally appearing at all auctions in force, but there seems to be one fastidious auctioneer in the city, if the subjoined be true:

RICHMOND, Feb. 16, 1872.

Henry J. Shaw, Esq.:

SIR: Here is your catalogue of books, and two works I should like to obtain, but as colored men are not permitted to attend any sale at Mr. Thomas W. Keesee's auction-room, please inform me how I can see the books desired. Very respectfully, JOHN OLIVER.

ANSWER.

I am sorry if you are prevented from attending. If you come down sale to-morrow I will sell you anything you want, or take your order at the auction. H. J. SHAW.

JOHN OLIVER is a colored preacher, and I presume he would bring no more charge against the auctioneer if he were not well founded.

Messrs. Jackson, Cardwell and Jackson last week for forging a receipt for the price of a cow which he bought, and he was sent to the Penitentiary for the offence. Among the witnesses for the defence on the trial was GEORGE PAGE, colored, who swore hard against JACKSON without avail. Page was arrested and placed in jail with JACKSON, of perjury, and JACKSON's wife was arrested for subornation of perjury. Yesterday a woman representing herself to be PAGE's wife called at the jail with dinner for PAGE. She was admitted, and PAGE was heartily of what she had brought, but he was soon seized with violent pains, and died shortly afterwards. Poison is alleged, and death seemed so sudden that it could be attributed to no other cause. It is now ascertained that he was poisoned, and a jury of inquest is

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY.

How the Anniversary was Observed in this City.

Three Distinct Processions During the Day.

Parade of the Second Brigade National Guard.

The Orangemen and the United Mechanics Turn Out.

An Oration in Brooklyn by Vice-President Colfax.

Banquets and Processions in Other Cities.

We have the authority of a famous Latin poet for the statement that it is pleasant and honorable to die for one's country; and although he never tried it, and those who did could not, from the circumstances of the case, describe their mortal sensations, no one has ever ventured to dispute the assertion. Parading for one's country, on a cold, blustering day like yesterday, is, however, quite another matter. There is neither pleasure nor glory in it on ordinary occasions, according to the view taken by the great mass of our citizens, and although the obstruction of our streets by processions on days not set apart as national holidays, is tolerated it is not regarded with favor by the people at large. Yesterday, however, was not an ordinary occasion, and was a national holiday. When the citizens of this Republic cease to hold in grateful remembrance the name of WASHINGTON and to honor the day which gave him birth, our institutions and character as a nation will have undergone a change which is not by any means to be anticipated. The 22d of February must always be a national holiday with us. But there were circumstances peculiar to the celebration of yesterday which lack it from the category of ordinary holidays. The effort of one class of citizens on the 12th of July last to deny to another less numerous class the privilege of making a street parade which they claimed for themselves, and the shameful yielding at first to the menaces by the City authorities, led and inspired by Mayor HALL, awakened a feeling which resulted then and there in the triumphal vindication of the principle involved. It was then resolved by the members of some of the purely American organizations that on WASHINGTON'S birthday the Orangemen should be invited to join in parading with them, and that it should be demonstrated, once and for all, that they were entitled to appear and march in their regalia in the streets, as well as their opponents who wear the green. The ranks of the Native American societies were rapidly recruited, and new organizations sprung into life. The threats indulged in by the Irish Catholics, after the riot of the 12th of July, aided the growth of these societies, and the day of the demonstration was anxiously awaited.

The air bit shrewdly; it was very cold, yet large crowds gathered in the streets, and waited patiently from an early hour to view the several processions which it had been announced would take place. The sun shone brightly, but the wind blew in fitful gusts, whirling clouds of dust into the faces of the assembled multitudes. The various detachments of troops and civic societies marched to their several rendezvous with colors flying, drums beating and bands playing. There was music in the air everywhere. From frequent housetops the national standard was displayed; the people were dressed in their "store-clothes;" and all the City had a gala appearance. The public buildings and many of the places of business down-town were closed, and a large proportion of the population was in the streets. Tempting bills were displayed in front of the theatres, at most of which matinees were announced in addition to the regular evening performances. In some of the churches services with bells chimed, and were blended with the general jubilation. There had been some apprehension of a disturbance, and the Police were distributed plentifully along the routes of the various processions, while large reserves were held in readiness at Police Head-quarters and elsewhere, to proceed to threatened points in an emergency. Provision had also been made for bringing the militiamen to the aid of the Police if occasion should arise. Happily there was no occasion during the procession. Everything passed off quietly during the day. After dark some ruffians attacked the house of the Marshal of the Orange parade, Mr. JOHNSON, has had blinds hung in the front windows. A detailed account of the manner in which the day was observed is given below.

The only Police incident of the day worthy of notice was the arrest of several alleged pickpockets on the line of march, and their incarceration at Police Head-quarters to await arraignment before a Magistrate. The names of these prisoners were Henry More, James Dunnas, John O'Brien, Peter McGee, William Jones, William Johnson, John Smith, Francis McIntoe and Charles Smith.

The Police escort of the Protestant procession numbered about twenty-five men, and was under the command of Capts. COPELAND, ALLAIRE and McDERMOTT.

The Parade of the American Protestant Association and Poor Ledger of Orangemen.

The parade of the American Protestant Association, which took place at 11 A. M., excited more curiosity and excitement than any event of the day, from the fact that a disturbance was feared. At 10½ A. M., Washington-square, where the Association was ordered to assemble, was densely thronged, and the windows and balconies of the houses on each side of the square presented a lively appearance. A large Police force was in attendance, together with two companies of the Eighty-fourth and Seventy-ninth Regiments, to act as escorts. Shortly before 11 o'clock, the various orders of the Association marched into the square, presenting a very respectable appearance and showing a marked absence of regalia, the insignia of most of the men being confined to a simple rosette.

The appearance of the Order of Orangemen, who assembled on the ground at 11 o'clock, attracted much attention. They mustered nearly 700 men, and represented four lodges, viz.: Gideon Lodge, Derry Walls Lodge, No Surrender Lodge and Joshua Lodge. Every member of this order wore orange and blue sashes, with large green rosettes. At 11¼ A. M., the procession moved out of the square, in the following order:

Section of Police.
Company of the Eighty-fourth Regiment.
Carriages with Grand and Past Masters.
Lodges of American Protestant Association.
Apprentices Boys' Colors.
Four Lodges of Orangemen.
Ninth Ward Loyal Union Republican Club.
Company of Seventy-ninth Regiment.
Section of Police.

The route was along Fifth-avenue to Eighth-street, and thence through Broadway to Union-square, where the sight was very brilliant. An enormous crowd had assembled, windows, balconies, and even housetops being thronged with people. The procession took a circuit round WASHINGTON'S statue, when their numbers and appearance could be readily observed. The mounted gentlemen were most active in preserving order. The Grand Master took a striking resemblance to HORACE GREELEY, and was mistaken by several spectators for the "Philosopher." The procession next passed round Fourth-avenue to Twenty-third-street, thence through Fifth-avenue to Thirty-fourth-street, and marched down to Eighth-avenue. It was now three o'clock, and the parade was thought likely to last much longer, and many anxious eyes were turned to the housetops and windows as the procession moved down Eighth-avenue, but not a sign of any disapprobation was met with. The procession, which is stationed Fourteenth-street (formed in Union-square), where a sort of reviewing stand had been erected in front of LINCOLN'S monument, after which the procession disbanded. The whole affair may be pronounced an entire success. The Parade of the Order of United American Mechanics.

The parade of the Order of United American Mechanics was one of the most striking incidents in connection with the day's celebration. It exceeded upward of sixty-four in the principal cities of the east the entering spirit, and the general appearance and steady bearing of the men, arrayed in the regalia of their order, excited much favorable comment. As early as 10 o'clock in the forenoon large bodies of men began to arrive, forming themselves into line in Murray-street, Warren-street and Park-place, and at 1 o'clock the Marshals directed the procession to move in the following order:

Police, under Capt. Thorne.
Band.
Star Council, No. 41, Hoboken.
Liberty Council, No. 64, Town of Union.
Gen. Washington's Carriage.
Golden Chariot.
Committee of Arrangements.
National Council, Officers in state carriages, with by State Council of New Jersey.
State Council of Pennsylvania.
Officers carriages each, with by one.
Band.
Camden Council, No. 18, of Newark.
Burnside Council, No. 42, of Jersey City.
Councils from Pennsylvania, &c.
Other New Jersey Councils.
Four Thomas's Carriages.
Washington Council, No. 1, of New-York City, with all New-York Councils.
Brooklyn Councils, with all Long Island Councils.
Staten Island Councils.
Police.

An immense crowd had assembled along Broadway and the City Hall as the procession passed. The carriage formerly used by Gen. WASHINGTON was drawn by eight white horses elegantly caparisoned. It is now nearly 100 years old, and is altogether a rickety and apparently uncouth piece of antiquity. It is built of a heavy wood, and is quite high for the present day, and its appearance on Broadway under ordinary circumstances could not fail to induce merriment. Yet the associations connected with it were so dear to the American heart, that its appearance was greeted with loud and unmoderated cheers along the entire line. Immediately behind the following WASHINGTON'S carriage came BARNUM'S golden chariot, bearing a young woman representing the Goddess of Liberty. Thinly clad in white and exposed to the intensely chilling winds that prevailed yesterday, her appearance created the liveliest sympathy, for her suffering was apparent, and severe. Still she bravely bore the ordeal and shared the plaudits of those who witnessed the display. The parade paused up Broadway to Fourteenth-street, thence through Fifth-avenue to Twenty-third-street, down by Fourth-avenue, and around the Madison-avenue Monument at Union-square where it was reviewed by the Committee of Arrangements in connection with the National and State Council officers, and dismissed. The only occurrence relating to the display that could excite regret was a very severe fall received by one of the Marshals in Broadway, near the City Hall, by being thrown from his horse. Relief was instantly on hand, and after a few minutes' delay, he was able to resume his position in the march.

Parade of the Military—The Second Brigade.

The Second Brigade of the First Division National Guard, Brigadier-Gen. AUGUSTUS FUNK commanding, assembled in Lafayette-square at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon for a full dress parade in honor of the day. The right of the line rested on Eighth-street, with the left formed on Great Jones-street. The brigade made a very creditable appearance, numbering over 3,000 men, rank and file. The Fifth Regiment, Lieut.-Col. KEARNEY commanding, formed on the extreme right, mustering 400 muskets; the Sixth Regiment, Col. FRANK W. SERRY commanding, assembled on the left of the Fifth with 500 muskets. Between the right and left wings of the Sixth Regiment, and more properly speaking in the centre were the Veterans of the War of 1812 in barouches, and escorted by a guard of honor in command of Sergt. ECKSTEIN of the Sixth. Many of the ancient heroes wore their old uniforms and the antiquated sabre, the curious old three-cornered hat with the pronounced cockade attracted much observation, and attracted no little attention. The Eighth Regiment Col. VILMAR commanding and mustering 500 muskets, rested the head of its column on the left of the Sixth; the Ninety-sixth Regiment, 400 muskets, Lieut.-Col. STAUPP commanding, was on the left of the Eleventh Regiment, and the Eighty-fourth Regiment, Col. P. A. CONKLIN commanding, mustering 400 men, with a splendid band of 40 pieces, assembled on the left of the Ninety-sixth. The Third Regiment of Cavalry, Col. BURGE commanding, numbering 400 sabres, held the extreme left of the column. The cavalry presented a very soldierly appearance. The Second Brigade in Lafayette-square was escorted through its line of march by two platoons of policemen, in command of Capt. COPELAND.

Promptly at 2½ P. M., the column, headed by Brig.-Gen. FUNK, with a mounted staff, moved up Broadway to Fourteenth-street, to Fourth-avenue, to Twenty-fourth-street, to Madison-avenue, to Thirty-fourth-street to Fifth-avenue, to Fourteenth-street to Union-square, where the column passed in review before the General Commanding, when the various regiments were dismissed out of line and marched to their armories. All along the route taken by the military procession the crowd was immense. This was the more remarkable when it is remembered that the parade was only the display of a few thousand soldiers and a few bands of music, and was large in comparison to hundreds of military parades which have taken place in the streets of this City. The only solution of the mysterious assemblage of a vast concourse is that thousands thought that there was a bare possibility of an outbreak upon the Eighty-fourth Regiment, and with a feeling of expectation of something a morbid curiosity for which innocent persons paid so dearly on the 12th of last July, the sidewalks were yesterday thronged to repletion. Happily many were disappointed, and nothing occurred to mar the parade of the Second Brigade.

After the Procession—An Outrageous Attack on the Grand Marshal of the A. P. A. Parade.

At about 8 o'clock last evening, two unknown miscreants made an outrageous and unwarranted attack on the drug-store and residence of Dr. JOHN J. JOHNSTON, No. 1 Dover-street. The Doctor, who acted as Grand Marshal of the procession of the American Protestant Association, yesterday, was sitting in the parlor in the rear of the store when the ruffians hurled two large paving-stones through the show-window, smashing the glass and sashes, and making a perfect wreck of the windows. One of the stones was thrown with such force as to reach the sitting-room, where Dr. JOHNSON was seated with his two daughters, and striking and breaking a chair from which one of the young ladies had just risen. The miscreants succeeded in making their escape. Capt. ALLAIRE of the Fourth Precinct, and several of his officers are in search of the ruffians.

The Veterans of 1812.

The veterans of the late war with Great Britain, numbering thirty-two old warriors, met at their head-quarters yesterday at 11 A. M. Col. FRANK W. SERRY, of the Sixth Regiment National Guard, tendered the veterans an invitation to join in the parade of the Second Brigade, which was accepted. Six handsome barouches were provided for the old soldiers and at 12 M. they were escorted to the armory of the Sixth Regiment in Tammany Hall, by a detachment from that regiment. At 2 o'clock the veterans moved with the Sixth Regiment between the right and left wings to the rendezvous of the Second Brigade in Lafayette-square. Returning to the armory of the Sixth Regiment after the parade was dismissed. The old soldiers, headed by the venerable Gen. HENRY RAYMOND, were then conducted to the Colonel's quarters and invited to a banquet in the officers' mess-room. Toasts were given, and patriotic speeches made by Gen. RAYMOND, Col. SERRY, and others, and it was late in the evening before the assemblage dispersed.

The following are the surviving veterans of the war of 1812, residing in and near New-York: Gen. H. Raymond, Col. Abraham Dale, Lieut. Jacob Lent, Lieut. Ezekiel Jones, Lieut. Henry Baker, Leonard Hoffman, Privates Sem'l Rockman, Jacob Olmstead, Henry Storms, Chas. Coombs, Wm. H. Brown, Samuel Moriaty, William Boyce, F. S. Wheeler, Thomas Blair, Isaac Brush, Hale Hart, Uriah Ryder, John Hickox, Charles Mead, Abraham Plemmon, Thomas Penger, Henry T. Jollie, Daniel Williamson, Ancel Tuns, Thomas Stewart, William Pudney, Jacob Van Montrach, Thomas J. Darling, Leonard Beam and James Masters. The oldest of the veterans, James Marquand, is in his ninety-third year, and was with SCOTT on Lundy's Lane as a private in the New-Hampshire contingent. The "youngster" is THOMAS JEFFERSON DARLING, who is seventy-two years of age. He was a drummer-boy on board of one of Commodore McDONOUGH'S gun-boats on Lake Champlain.

The heroes were most hospitably treated by Col. SERRY and the officers of the Sixth, and it was a very touching spectacle to witness the tender care with which the youngsters of the

MR. COLFAX IN BROOKLYN.

Address Before the Young Men's Christian Association—Eulogium of Washington—Remarks on the Present Times.

The anniversary of WASHINGTON'S birthday was celebrated, last evening, at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, under the auspices of the Young Men's Christian Association in the presence of a very large and appreciative audience. Prayer was offered by Rev. ALEXANDER H. HOVE, D. D. The musical and vocal exercises comprised a chorus to Astarte's life and anthem, under the direction of Mr. S. H. MERRILL, the organ. Addresses were delivered by Col. A. M. PRESCOTT and Hon. HENRY C. MURPHY, eulogizing WASHINGTON and condemning the numerous corruptions and derelictions of the public service at the present time, and which even penetrated the Legislature itself. They exhorted young men to take a political interest in defense of honest government as the only means of averting the calamities which threatened the Republic.

ADDRESS OF VICE-PRESIDENT COLFAX.

Vice-President COLFAX, who was received with cheers again and again renewed, was then introduced. After some remarks appropriate to the celebration and a description of WASHINGTON'S early life, Mr. COLFAX continued to say:

WASHINGTON'S character was delineated by JEFFERSON in 1814 thus:

"His mind was great and powerful, without being of the very first order; his penetration strong, though not so quick as that of NEWTON, BACON, or LOCKE, and so far as he went, his judgment was sound. He was slow in execution; hesitating and timid in counsel, yet firm and firm in conclusion. He was incapable of fear, meeting personal danger with the calmest unconcern. Perhaps the master feature in his character was self-command. Never did a man of any consideration was maturely weighed, determining it he saw a doubt, but when once decided, going through with his purpose, whatever obstacle opposed. His temperance was the most perfect, his habits the most regular, his life the purest, his character the most blameless of any I have ever known. He was indeed, in every sense of the words, a wise, a good, and a great man. His temper was naturally irritable and high-toned, but habitual self-command kept it in all habitual accounts ever it. His heart was not warm in its affections, but he carefully cultivated every man's value, and gave him a share of his good-will in proportion to it. He was therefore, his conduct was such as to gain all the public confidence, and he approved every measure they wished, during his administration, except one, which was not popular. Although in the circle of his friends he took a free share in conversation, his colloquial talents were not above mediocrity, possessing neither copiousness nor choice of words. In public, when called on for a sudden opinion, he was unready and embarrassed. Yet he wrote coolly, rather diffusely, in an easy and correct style. On the whole, I consider this as the most perfect character of any I have ever known or read of. His life was spotless, his character without blemish or reproach. Never did nature and fortune combine more perfectly to make a great man."

He framed for his own guidance rules written when but fourteen years old. Here are a few:

"Let your conversation be without malice or envy.

"Be not hasty to believe flying reports to the disparagement of any.

"Sleep not yourself glad at the misfortune of another, though he was your enemy.

"When a man does all he can, though he succeeds not, blame not.

"Speak no evil of the absent, for it is injust.

"Labor to keep alive in your breast that little spark of celestial fire called conscience."
